Flying to Paris Dream Again, Ladies Worse Than Whiskey A Doubting Bishop

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE HUGE French monoplane, Yellow Bird, is on her way to the landing field near Paris with three plucky young Frenchmen in charge.

If they succeed, as every American hopes they will, it will not be a duplication of Lindbergh's feat. He flew alone, and without stopping, from New York to Paris.

That will be done before long as a regular part of commercial flying. But nobody, ever again, will do it for the first time.

Young ladies may resume their dreams. A "High Court official" says the Prince of Wales isn't engaged to Princess Ingrid of Sweden, and the rumor is "vexatious to English Royalty."

New York newspapers have printed pages about "The torch murder." It was a crime unusually vile and cruel, the murderer setting fire to a woman to get rid of her.

Crime ceases to be news in these crime-days. But you observe with some interest that whereas in the average killing police find empty gin bottles, in this atrocious crime they find little vials that contained morphine pills. In all their results, drugs are worse than whiskey.

Bishop McConnell of the New York Methodist Episcopal area can't be principal speaker at a convention in Denver, because he is unsound in his beliefs.

The bishop, it seems, does not believe that the sun stopped in its journey around the world when told to do so by Joshua, that he might have more daylight for fighting.

Bishop McConnell goes so far as to say that the sun doesn't really go round the earth.

Also the bishop doesn't believe that Jonah, even if the whale did swallow him, could have lived comfortably in its stomach for some time, going ahead about his business when restored to land.

Jonah could not have lived without air while the whale was submerged, says the modernist bishop.

How many of the clergymen that reject Bishop McConnell really believe the things that he does not believe?

Money, the modern game of usury, goes up and down in value like cotton, wheat and sugar. It was comparatively cheap yesterday. In Wall Street only 7 per cent.

Stocks were cheerful in consequence. "Big Steel," General Electric and some others began climbing upward.

The poor bears are still waiting for the "Collapse" that is to enrich them.

If our famous Federal Reserve had really "stabilized credit" instead of stabilizing usury, the bears would have been still sadder.

Perhaps somebody sold out too soon or didn't "get in" soon enough.

Sir Oliver Lodge, English scientist, says everybody not foolish will soon live to be 100. Animals ordinarily live 10 times as long as is required for them to reach maturity. On that basis men should live to 150 at least, and probably will if they want to.

That would complicate the population problem.

Young Mr. Greenhut proposes a gigantic chain of smaller newspapers, and wishes you to know that he is no disguised Power Trust.

He has undertaken a difficult task. Any one of a thousand local newspaper editors can tell him of many differences between a newspaper chain and a chain of retail shops.

The House, rejecting the debenture plan, deprives middlemen of a comfortable profit on farm exports.

Intelligent farmers know that it wouldn't have given them much if anything. The President is supported in his common sense attitude.

An airplane, with a new "air mail pickup," takes mail sacks from the deck of the Leviathan at sea, hurrying the mail ashore. The plan will save two days in transatlantic mail delivery.

Soon planes will carry mail from shore to ships, passengers also, and save more than five days. It is hard to realize now and in a few years it will be difficult to realize that men ever doubted it.

French fliers on the Yellow Bird and the approximate route they followed on their successful flight from Old Orchard, Me

200 MILES OFF FROM PORTUGAL

New York, June 14 (AP)—The International Telephone & Telegraph Company announced today that it had received word over its commercial cables that the French transatlantic plane Yellow Bird was 200 miles off the Portuguese coast and that it planned to land for refuelling in Portugal and to continue to Paris tomorrow.

(By Associated Press)

Wireless reports from two ocean steamers today indicated that the transatlantic monoplane Yellow Bird was faring well on its air road from the United States to France.

The French line steamer Niagara reported that at 6 a. m., Boston time, it was in communication with the plane and that all was well. Paris hours later the Cunarder Lavonia picked up the plane by radio and received the same encouraging report.

The Niagara at 41.14 N. and 22.16 W. was between 300 and 400 miles northeast of the Azores when she spoke to the Yellow Bird and the Lavonia was 500 miles northeast of the island when she raised the plane. The Niagara's position was on the line to Portugal that the Yellow Bird's crew had plotted.

In neither instance did the Yellow Bird give her position, and as it has a radio range of 600 miles, its position cannot be accurately plotted from the positions of the steamers.

But an earlier report from the French liner Rochambeau had said the plane had decided to take the southern route by way of the Azores and Portugal, so it was supposed that she was somewhere be-

FLIGHT BULLETINS!

New York, June 14 (AP)—The French line steamer Niagara reported by wireless today that it was in communication with the transatlantic monoplane Yellow Bird at 6 o'clock this morning, eastern daylight time, and that everything was reported well on board the plane.

Cherbourg, France, June 14 (AP)—Wind from the southwest here became violent this afternoon, with heavy clouds and squalls of rain. The Yellow Bird will find navigating difficult if it passes as far north as the English channel.

Paris, June 14 (AP)—Favorable winds for the French transatlantic airplane Yellow Bird blew all along the northern coast of France and Brittany early this afternoon to speed the three French aviators on to their destined goal at Paris.

Brest, France, June 14—A 30-mile wind blew here this afternoon from the direction west southwest. This would favor the French transatlantic fliers if they cross the Brittany coast at St. Nazaire. The sky was overcast, with intermittent showers.

tween the Azores and the mainland when she communicated with the Niagara and the Laconia.

The Yellow Bird told the Rochambeau that it was taking the southern course because of an unexpected high rate of gasoline consumption.

From the fact that it made no mention of its fuel supply in its communication hours later to the Niagara and Laconia, it was assumed that a re-check of the tanks had been reassuring.

The French Government weather bureau forecast that the fliers would have favorable tail winds on the approach to the coast.

Rene Lefevre's brother today received a cablegram saying the plane carried sufficient fuel for 32 hours and that the fliers expected to make the trip in 30, which would bring the ship into Le Bourget at 9 p. m. or 9 p. m., Boston time.

Other advices indicate that the plane carried enough fuel for 36 hours, depending upon any head winds or storms which she may have to fight.

N. E. Gets Radio Messages of Yellow Bird Far at Sea

High powered radio stations on the New England coast at 2:32 a. m. (eastern daylight time) today received definite word that the Paris-bound monoplane Yellow Bird at approximately 11:32 o'clock last night was talking with two steamships about 2000 miles east of this coastline.

Searching the air for some trace of the Yellow Bird, the stations finally received a reply from the United States liner American Farmer.

The radio operator aboard the American Farmer said that at approximately 11:32 p. m. he heard the Yellow Bird radio to the Cunard liner Laconia, whose radio call letters are GJCD.

A short time later the American Farmer's radio man again heard the plane message the French liner Rochambeau, whose radio call letters are FNTW.

2000 MILES EAST.

Radio operators on the New England coastline estimated that the American Farmer was at least 2000 miles east, but the position of the plane was not known. However, the wave length of the radio sending apparatus aboard the Yellow Bird was 600 meters and the plane, radio operators in this vicinity estimated, must have been within the range of the American Farmer. The call letters of the Yellow Bird are FAX.

The plane took off from the beach at Old Orchard at 10:08 a. m. yesterday, Boston time, it was reported by the freighter Wythville 850 miles east and slightly south of Old Orchard at 8:45 p. m. Boston time, when it had been in the air about eight and one-half hours and was speeding 100 miles an hour.

CHANGES HER COURSE

The steamship Rochambeau reported to the French line today that the Yellow Bird had changed its course. The message from the Rochambeau, received at 2 a. m. in somewhat garbled French, was translated as follows: "On account of heavy use of gasoline we are changing our course and going toward the Azores and the Portuguese coast."

Some fliers saw in the report from the Rochambeau an indication that the Frenchmen were heading for the Azores to make a landing there. They pointed out that if the Yellow Bird had progressed some 600 miles along the southerly route and then "cornered" to head for the Azores, would mean turning approximately due south and then for the next 300 miles or so no progress would be made in the direction of the goal.

MIGHT LAND AT AZORES

This, they maintained, would not be done unless it was considered highly probable that a landing would have to be made before the mainland could be reached.

The other side of this line of reasoning, however, was that if the Yellow Bird turned south from a point 1600 miles from Maine along the northern route to 2 a. m. it should have reached the Azores by 7 or 8 o'clock.

The more optimistic were confident that the plane had swung southward until it picked up the Azores, but not so near as to be sighted from the ground and had then wheeled along the easterly course to Portugal.

The shortest course from the Azores to the mainland is to Lisbon, 813 miles, but the Frenchmen had planned when leaving that if they should take the southerly course they would head from the Azores northeast to Cape Finisterre at the very northern point of Portugal, which would add another 100 miles or so to the distance over water.

Aviators were at a loss to explain the unexpectedly high consumption of fuel reported by the Rochambeau. The Yellow Bird had been flown repeatedly in test flights and the rate of consumption was supposed to have been definitely determined.

One possibility considered by some quarters was that the added weight of a stowaway rumored to be on board the plane had been enough to upset the calculations on fuel consumption, and cause the engine to burn more than the expected amount.

Parents Pray for Safety of Yellow Bird Stowaway

Portland, Me., June 14 (INS)—A mother's prayers fervently went up to heaven for the safety of her boy, and probably a father's too, as he silently went about his tailor shop today.

The anxious parents are Mr. and Mrs. Morris H. Schreiber, wh-se 22-year-old adventurous son, Arthur, was believed to be a stowaway aboard the Old Orchard Beach to Paris monoplane Yellow Bird.

"God will protect him," cried the mother. The father would say nothing.

The flip of a coin with a pal, J. Wilbur Clark of Hartford, Ct., won the "great adventure" for Arthur, according to statements made at Old Orchard Beach by Clark. A typical American boy—fearless of death, looking for adventure for the pure joy of it and with a business eye for the financial benefits if he succeeded—was the description of Arthur by his friend.

Schrieber and Clark fell in together while watching the airplanes Yellow Bird and Green Flash. Clark said they began talking about stowing away on one of them Schreiber wanted to go on the Green Flash to Rome but told Clark that there didn't seem to be enough room on the plane, which later all but "cracked up" at the attempted take-off.

Then, according to Clark, Schreiber climbed into the Yellow Bird while the trio of French airmen were having their photograph taken in front of the propeller.

Thea Rasche Plans to Fly Across Atlantic Alone

Old Orchard, Me., June 14—(INS)—Miss Thea Rasche, the "flying fraulein" of Germany, plans to start on a transatlantic nonstop flight to Berlin from the beach here within a week or ten days, according to information received this afternoon.

It was understood here that Miss Rasche planned to make the transatlantic air trip alone.

COTTON TARIFF PROTESTED BY IMPORTERS

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Opposition to increases proposed in the House tariff bill on cotton textiles was voiced today before a Senate finance sub-committee by Frederic B. B. Shipley, of the National Council of American Importers and Traders.

He declared little increased protection was needed for the industry because the reports greatly exceeded the imports and because unit production costs in this country were lower than in competing countries including labor expenses, due to the use by domestic manufacturers of automatic looms.

The House bill, he said, increased the duties on cotton cloths alone in about 1000 items. He urged amendment that more adequate protection was needed on finer cotton goods which are not made, Shipley contended, as imports of these goods were only 1-3 per cent of the total domestic textile production.

HUGE CROWD AT LE BOURGET TO GREET FLIERS

Le Bourget, France, June 14—The hitherto unparalleled enthusiasm that greeted the arrival of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on this flying field after his trail-blazing flight across the Atlantic two years ago was threatened with eclipse today as France prepared to welcome its native heroes, Ameno Lotti, Jean Assolant and Rene Lefevre, bound for Le Bourget from Old Orchard, Me.

For the moment all speculation here turns on whether the airmen will be able to beat the time of Lindbergh, 33½ hours, for his trip comes in mind of the French whenever they think of ocean flights.

From the early hours of the morning the administrative headquarters was deluged with requests from persons interested in the progress of the flight, and the break of day saw a huge crowd already assembled at the field to await the arrival of the Yellow Bird.

EXTRA POLICE ON DUTY

Many brought lunches prepared to stand about the entire day in the hope of greeting the fliers personally.

Every hour additional forces of police were assigned to strategic points on the field to keep the crowd in order.

The authorities planned to supplement the police guards with soldiers and to take every precaution to keep the crowd away from the planes after they touch down.

The French air force had arranged for searchlights and flood lights if the landing is made at night.

Elaborate arrangements also were made for parking facilities for those privileged to bring their cars near the field.

LOTTI'S PARENTS AT FIELD

The parents of Ameno Lotti, the Yellow Bird's radio operator, spent an almost sleepless night. Their thoughts were out over the Atlantic with their son. Mme. Lotti remained at her apartment today, but her husband was at his office in the hotel which bears his name. However, they were both confident the flight would succeed.

M. Lotti went to Le Bourget this afternoon to await the arrived of the Yellow Bird.

If Lotti, Assolant and Lefevre land safely, it goes without saying they will be greeted as conquering heroes, for the French, ever an emotional race, have prayed ever since Lindbergh flew the Atlantic that some airman of French blood might eclipse his feat.

The three airmen are exceedingly popular with the French people.

Biddeford Welcome Saddened by Death

Biddeford, Me., June 14—The welcome celebration given in honor of Mayor and Mrs. George C Precourt on their return from an extended European trip, was saddened by the receipt of a cablegram announcing the death in Biddeford, Eng., of ex-Mayor W. T. Coaman.

Coaman visited this city last summer and he entertained Mayor and Mrs. Precourt not long ago in the quaint English town for which Biddeford was named. He died suddenly of heart disease, in the middle of the square.

Peter Drummond of Windsor, Vt., driver of the other car, had his three boys with him and all four received slight cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Bresnahan's husband, Morris, who was riding beside her, suffered serious injuries. Attendants at the hospital believe he has a good chance for recovery.

Drummond was held by state police on charges of manslaughter and driving so as to endanger the public. The police are endeavoring to fix the blame.

The message was timed "Noon G. M. T." (Approximately 8 a. m., E. S. T.)

Lisbon, June 14 (INS)—No news concerning the Yellow Bird had been received in Lisbon at a late hour today. There was no confirmation of a rumor from Paris that the plane had been forced down off Portugal.

Simpson resided in this city some years ago, later going to California, where he became a well-to-do automobile dealer.

They said he was on his way to Augusta, where another brother lives and where there was to have been a family reunion. In addition to his mother and brother, Simpson had four sisters.

The woman said they could not understand how Charles' body came to be in the river, and that their other brother was on his way to Hampton from Maine.

They did not explain why Charles had not stopped at Boston on his way to Maine.

According to police at Hampton, their statement that Charles was wealthy was not in accordance with information contained in a telegram found in his pocket.

This wire, signed by P. D. Simpson of Seal Harbor, and sent from Bar Harbor, indicated transportation funds were being sent to Charles for his return from San Francisco to Maine.

The telegram was dated May 13, but the women made no mention of it.

In the meantime Hampton police were awaiting the report of the autopsy to decide what action to take.

FLAG ENVOYS TO BE HEARD OVER RADIO TONIGHT

Washington, June, 14—At the U. S. Capitol tonight the nationwide flag essay contest, conducted by the United States Flag Association and the Hearst newspapers, in which 2,0,000 school children participated, will come to a thrilling climax when four of the eight finalists chosen from 36 regional winners, in a great public ceremony, will be selected to make a tour of the world.

In conjunction with the annual Capitol Flag Day exercises of the Grand Army of the Republic, the eight finalists, on the east steps of the Capitol building will read aloud their essays on the national emblem and its symbolism.

The young essayists will be heard abroad through the land. Their voices will be broadcast over the U. S. Naval station, NAA and station WOL.

As they read, the national jury of judges, will listen and a few moments later the names of the four winners will be announced.

The men judges are: William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools of the District of Columbia, and Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman.

At 4:45 o'clock the ceremony will take place before the microphone. They will be judged for their manner of delivery, but the means of selection will not be the final ...

As a fitting prelude to tonight's climax, the entire group of flag champions will journey to Arlington Cemetery to honor the Unknown dead.

Miss Conway will lay a wreath on the tomb.

After the visit to Arlington, the party will return to their quarters at the Mayflower Hotel, have lunch, and then rest until time to go to the Capitol. They will be accompanied by Col. James A. Moss, president of the United States Flag Association, and Col. Frank Knox, general manager; E. J. Mahoney, of the Washington Herald, and William F Seals of the Hearst newspapers.

CHILDREN ON PROGRAM

G.O.P. FEAR DEFEAT ON TARIFF

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Washington, June 14—Whether a Republican president or the Democratic party is to deserve the credit and win the political advantage of saving the country from the oppressively high tariff which the Republican party has jammed through the House and is preparing to jockey through the Senate, depends in large part upon the representatives in the Senate of the Democratic party from a group of southern states.

You may expect, therefore, to see the revision upward which the regular Republicans of the Senate intend to make in the schedules of the House bill, primarily designed to win the votes of Democratic Senators from the southern states of North Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee.

For the situation is this:

If the Democrats of the Senate line up against the Republican tariff bill and maintain a united front against it, they can count upon the support of enough progressive Republican senators to give them control of the Senate.

COALITION POSSIBLE

With the Senate in the control of all the Democrats and a dozen progressive Republican senators, that progressive coalition will deserve the credit and win the political advantage of defeating the Republican party's tariff bill.

In that event, the Democrats and the progressive Republicans can then go into the next congressional campaign united in opposition to a tariff for extortion. On that issue they would have a good chance to win enough seats in the House to deprive the regular Republicans of a working majority.

But, if the Republicans of the Senate who follow the leadership of Senator Watson of Indiana, instead of co-operating with such progressive leaders as are opposed to the House tariff bill, succeed in defeating the Democrats of the Senate on the question of the tariff, the Republican party will pass through the Senate an even more oppressive tariff bill than the Republican House passed the other day.

In that event, it seems safe to prophesy that President Hoover will welcome the opportunity to veto the party's tariff bill upon the ground that it breaks the promise which he made to the country as the party's candidate for President in the last campaign—a promise of limited and scientific revision of the tariff in benefit the farmer as opposed to a general and political revision of the tariff upward to satisfy the greed of special interests.

1000 DEMOCRATS

Under the leadership of Senator Watson of Indiana, those Republican senators who follow him, apparently can count upon taking from the Democratic party enough votes from the Southern States of North Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Tennessee and Texas, to put the Republican party's tariff bill through the Senate.

For the remainder of the special session, therefore the Democratic Senators will hold the right of the line of battle in the fight of the Democratic senators and their Progressive Republican allies to defeat the worst tariff bill in American history are:

Senator Simmons and Overman of North Carolina; Senators Fletcher and Trammell of Florida; Senators Ransdell and Broussard of Louisiana; Senators Sheppard and Conally of Texas, and Senators McKellar and Tyson of Tennessee.

If these 10 Democratic senators from the Southern States remain loyal to Democratic principles and refuse to surrender to the demands of those special interests of their respective states, which are now supporting the Republican party's tariff bill, that economic monstrosity will be defeated by the Senate and a progressive Democratic party and the progressive wing of the Republican party will deserve the credit and win the political advantage sure to result from such a victory.

DAWES MUM ON MISSION AS HE DEPARTS

Southampton, Eng., June 14 (AP)—Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, newly accredited to Great Britain, today accepted the welcome of this city on disembarking from the liner Olympic and immediately declined to be interviewed.

Gen. Dawes expressed his delight over coming to England as the American ambassador, but would make no disclosure of any message he might be bearing from President Hoover to Premier Ramsay MacDonald.

"I quite understand the interest of the press in my official instructions," he said when besieged of reporters, "but no doubt the press can see the wisdom of my declination to be interviewed."

Replying to speeches of welcome, the new ambassador recalled an historic occasion 12 years ago when he, with the 17th U. S. Engineers, embarked on a cattle boat at Southampton to go to France to join the fighting alongside the glorious British army."

In a prepared statement, Ambassador Dawes said:

"I do not feel a stranger here—no one could with such associations—and I hope I am not regarded as such.

"I have never been a diplomat. I have many faults, but somehow I am sure you will put up with them as have my own people."

Gen. Dawes confirmed news of his plan to go Saturday night to confer with Premier MacDonald in Scotland. He said he would present his credentials tomorrow to King George at Windsor.

Hats off!

"trusty" list at the institution and were employed on the prison farm. Early today they went to the barn, accompanied by a single guard, to milk the cows.

While purporting to be adjusting the mechanical milking machine they slipped out of a rear door of the barn and had disappeared before the guard was aware they had gone.

The siren warning that prisoners had escaped was sounded and a prison posse started in search of them. Meantime prison officials broadcast news of the escape with descriptions.

Boston police received the descriptions from the officials at Concord and have after noon and the city is being scoured for the fugitives.

COMMUTERS INDIGNANT AT CLOSING NORTH FERRY

SAVED FROM DEATH

Staff photo shows James Sullivan, Jr., aged 3, of 40 Lambert st., Roxbury, who was slowly choking to death from a piece of candy stuck in his throat in the Roxbury Hospital when Dr. Louis E. Wolfson raced to the hospital to operate. The child had but 60 seconds to live when the doctor removed the candy, hospital officials say. Photo also shows Muriel MacDonald, R. N., who is caring for the boy.

TRAFFIC SNARLS AND DELAYS RESULT

Thousands of citizens of East Boston, Orient Heights, Winthrop and other communities, inconvenienced by the closing of the North Ferry, today voiced vigorous protest against what they termed the "indifference of Boston city officials" to their rights and interests.

Community meetings are planned to crystallize a demand that the ferry service be re-opened, or that adequate facilities be provided to enable them to travel between their homes and places of business.

Practically without notice, the North Ferry was closed three days ago and, according to city officials, this important transportation route will remain closed for at least another month. The reason given is that necessary repairs must be made to the ferry slips.

SIGNS ARE VAGUE.

Patrons of the ferry complain that officials have not placed enough signs in Battery st., notifying the traveling public the ferry is closed.

The only signs in evidence are one on each side of the street. One reads "This Ferry Closed," and the other "Use Other Ferry." There is nothing to indicate, they say, where the "other ferry" is located.

Regular patrons of the North Ferry know that the South Ferry is being used for the overflow of East Boston traffic during the closing, but this, it is claimed, has resulted in a serious traffic congestion at the South Ferry that is a menace to public safety and a deterrent to efficient service.

According to the road tourists' auto map, the South Ferry is recorded as the "gateway to the North Shore," and the abnormal conditions at this time of the year tax the ingenuity of officials to handle the heavy tourist traffic. This has been doubled since the closing of the North Ferry.

"CITY MUST ACT"

"Confusion worse confounded," was the indignant comment of one prominent Boston business man today in describing conditions. "The city has got to do something and do it quick."

During the closing of the North ferry the ferryboats Columbia, Lieut. Flaherty and the Donahoe have been diverted to the South ferry to make the East Boston run. They operate every seven minutes and the trip across takes five minutes. Traffic in Eastern ave. as a result is more congested than it has ever been.

Commuters claim the heavy auto and truck traffic impairs the running schedules of ferryboats and that they are delayed in reaching their place of employment in the city in the morning, and also delayed in reaching home in the evening.

RICH DEATH CAR DRIVER IS IN TROUBLE AGAIN

IS JAILED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Just recovered from hospital treatment for a fractured skull received in an automobile accident in which two Brookline sisters were killed, James Graham, 22, son of a Newton millionaire, was arrested today by Hingham police when he and his brother John were chased for miles.

Both were taken into Hingham district court where Judge Pratt gave sentences on four different charges, which the boys appealed. In court police said soon after the Graham car was first sighted "going some" John changed seats with James, who had lost his driving license because of the other accident.

Last Thanksgiving Day James was operating a car which overturned and caused the deaths of Bernice and Janet Chimilinski and confined him to a hospital until recently.

Judge Pratt fined James $10 on a drunkenness charge, and $100 for operating an automobile while intoxicated. He also gave the young man a 10-day sentence for driving after his license had been taken away from him, and another 30 days for driving in a manner which threatened public safety.

John Graham, who police say took over the wheel when the officers were seen chasing the couple, was found not guilty of operating so as to endanger the public. He was fined $10 on a drunkenness charge and $100 on a count of operating the machine while intoxicated.

'SALOME' HIDES AS DIPLOMATS VIEW ART

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

London, June 14—Federico Beltran-Masses' "Salome," first on view to the press in the New Burlington galleries, will be locked up during today's exclusive diplomatic and society viewing of the Spanish artist's remarkable exhibition. It will be restored to its place in line for the public opening tomorrow.

As the portraitist explained to Universal Service:

"Merry Del Val, the Spanish ambassador, opens the exhibition formally Saturday on behalf of King Alfonso of Spain. Merry Del Val's brother is a Cardinal at Rome. I would not wish him any possible embarrassment because of any outcry against my 'Salome.'

MRS. GRUNDY BUSY

"Even when I told his excellency I was removing 'Salome' temporarily for the ceremony, he was gracious enough gallantly to protest against such a consideration of his official dignity."

Already London's Mrs. Grundy has spotted "Salome" among the glowing canvases of this extraordinary Spaniard who mixes imagination with his colors. The Daily Express says:

OTHERS ARE "BOLD."

"Salome" is only one of more than 100 creations of the Spanish genius which are hung at Burlington House—portraits, allegorical subjects and fugitive Spanish peasant scenes. If Mrs. Grundy picks out "Salome" as provocative, she had also better include "The Wicked Maja," "The Night of Eve" and "The Ruby," in all of which Beltran-Masses expresses himself in his own peculiar and individual way.

Since "Salome" bids fair to become internationally famous—for she's going to America later—a bit of description may be apropos. This Salome is a young woman totally nude except for jeweled garters, casting herself back against glowing cushions while a black slave presses a dish containing the head of John the Baptist against her ribs.

SISTER DENIES SHE SCRATCHED ALLEN'S WIFE

Miss Ruth Allen, sister of Herbert S. Allen, manager of a Boston hotel, who is contesting the petition of his wife, Kathryn, for separate support, denied on the witness stand today that she had scratched Mrs. Allen or said anything to the Allen children against their mother.

Evidence in the case was concluded after other members of the Allen family had testified before Judge Dolan in Suffolk Probate Court.

Mrs. Sarah Allen, mother of the respondent, denied she had ever ordered her daughter-in-law to leave her house. She said the wife had accused her son of having struck her.

The mother said the trouble between her son and his wife was "common knowledge in the neighborhood" long before she learned of it. She declared there was a decided difference in the attitude of her grandchildren toward her when they were alone with her. On one occasion she said she heard her son say his wife was "rotten."

GIVEN 6 MONTHS TO PAY FINE

The case of Miss Mary B. Thornton of 3123 Washington st., Jamaica Plain, was continued for six months by Chief Justice Hall in the Suffolk Superior Court, with the understanding that at the expiration of that time she pay a fine of $250 or serve the fine out in jail. She pleaded guilty to seven counts of larceny, totalling $700, from her former employer, the Warren Trask Company.

Miss Thornton, it was said, worked for the company as bookkeeper and office manager for a period of about 10 months. In the period from June 15, 1928, to May 22, 1929, it was charged, she took amounts of money, ranging from $36 to $256.

Gloucester Man Fined $200 in Crash

Ralph M. Naves, 18, of 4 Summit st., Gloucester, who was arrested June 8 by Patrolmen Casey and Burnett after he had tried to drive his automobile between an electric car and a parked automobile on Lewis st., Lynn, was fined $200 by Judge Ralph W. Reeve. He appealed and was held in $800 bonds.

Naves' auto hit the electric car, it was said, and swerved against the parked machine belonging to Percy Randall of Swampscott. Randall had to be taken to the Lynn Hospital for treatment of injuries sustained.

Vermont Girl, 8, Sues for $10,000

St. Johnsbury, Vt., June 14—Suit was started in Caledonia County Court for Germaine Ladrie by her next friend against Joseph Ladrie of Barre. The eight-year-old plaintiff seeks damages of $10,000 for alleged injuries when a car operated by the defendant backed into her as she was standing on the lawn of her home. The little girl was the first witness and was on the stand one hour. The mother, nurse and the attending doctor were the other witnesses.

SCORES IN PERIL BY EXPLOSION

Scores of pedestrians had narrow escapes from injury today when a manhole cover of the Edison Electrical Illuminating Co. in front of 15 School st. was blown 20 feet into the air.

Just what caused the explosion in the manhole is not known, but the explosion, which rocked School st., could be heard several blocks and phone calls were rushed to police and fire headquarters. Two automobiles were within a few inches of being struck by the manhole cover when it landed. Ambulances were rushed to the scene, but were of no use as no one was injured. The police roped off School st. from City Hall ave. to Washington st. and traffic was diverted over Province st.

When the firemen arrived they were unable to find any blaze, unlike the explosion which occurred in Summer st. several months ago, when several persons were injured.

An emergency crew from the Edison company was rushed to the scene and workers were immediately sent into the manhole to determine the cause of the explosion. Firemen and police uncovered five other manholes to prevent further explosions.

BARE LEGS AT SMITH ROIL EX-MAYOR

Pittsfield, June 14—The practice of Smith College girls going about with legs bare has aroused the indignation of former Mayor Harry E. Bicknell of Northampton, who spoke at the annual Old Folks' Association outing in Cummington.

Bare legs are distasteful to Bicknell, and he wants something done about it. Referring to Smith College girls he said:

"They ought to wear some kind of hose but they don't and I don't like it. There should be more of your kind who think of decent living and decent dressing."

His audience was composed of men and women 60 years of age or older.

COUNTERFEIT GIRL HUNTED IN LYNN

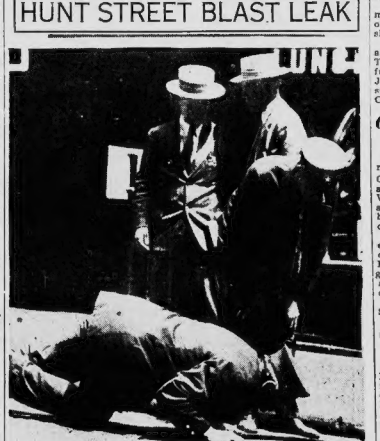

A 17-year-old red-headed girl was sought as a passer of counterfeit coins today in Lynn after two shopkeepers complained that they had been victimized.

According to the shopkeepers, the girl was riding with a 50-year-old man in a blue sports roadster.

Paulline Nichols, proprietor of a small shop in Washington st, Lynn, told police the girl went into her store, made a five-cent purchase, handed over a counterfeit 25-cent piece and received 20 cents in change.

Nicholas Ferraro, proprietor of a shop next door, told the same story.

Blind Roomer Lives in House of the Dead For Forty Hours

Columbus, O., June 14 (AP)—A blind roomer lived for days in the home of Tom Peterson, 58, and his wife, 55, going and coming and calling to them, and thinking little of it when they failed to respond.

Neighbors saw him moving about, but missed the Petersons and called police, who found liquor bottles strewn about and the house in disorder.

Tests of the roomer showed it was poisonous. When the roomer returned later he was told that for forty hours he had lived in a house tenanted by the dead.

GANGMEN BURN MAN AT STAKE

Chicago, June 14 (INS)—One of gangland's most brutal murders was revealed today in the big timber county of Northern Wisconsin, according to reports received here.

The body of a man who had been wired to a stake, shot and then disfigured by fire beyond identification, was discovered near Rhinelander.

The only hope of identifying the man lay in the finding of a bunch of keys near the body and the shotgun used by the slayers.

That part of Wisconsin is known as a retreat for Chicago gangsters. The body was found about 30 miles from the summer home of "Polack Joe" Saltis and 40 miles from the summer residence of "Scarface" Capone.

CUPID IS SPEED THIS TIME AND IS IN COURT

Yonkers, N. Y., June 14 (AP)—Isabelle D. Thatcher, 19, of Park ave., New York, and Lloyd Smith, 23, of New Haven Ct., were engaged two years ago, but the engagement was broken and they did not meet again. Today, however, they met in Yonkers city court by strange coincidence, and left later arm in arm.

Miss Thatcher was handed a summons on May 10 for speeding at 52 miles an hour along Bronx parkway, and on June 9 Smith got a ticket for doing 56 along that highway.

HOLIDAY SPOILED BY FIRECRACKER

While Tangney, who lives in Highland rd, West Somerville, was walking today in Boston ave., Somerville, some boys lighted a firecracker.

The explosion caused one of the youths to jump back and he tripped Tangney, who was bowled over by an auto.

Tangney suffered bruises and contusions.

Theo Morrison, first selectman of Princeton, today said he was convinced the boy was no longer alive and that the search will soon be abandoned. Friends have combined to offer a $100 reward for the boy, dead or alive. Another search over the week-end will follow.

Selectman Morrison feels that a giant eagle from nearby mountains has carried off the child, as the manner that several limbs of fairly heavy weight have been taken into the air by the winged raiders.

The youthful skipper, Jose Barreno, 17, of New Bedford, will be sentenced later.

Women Banned After 2-Year Trial by Club

New York, June 14 (AP)—The monastery of the friars, or in other words the clubhouse of that actors' organization, has closed its doors to women after a two-year trial.

Not that the Friars ever were free and easy in their hospitality to the ladies, but for the last two years they have permitted them the use of a small reception room at the entrance. Now, even that privilege is to be withdrawn and the women will have to park in their cars, or, as James J. Corbett suggested, remain at home.

"It wasn't that the room mattered," said "Gentleman Jim," "but there isn't any gentlemen's club that likes to have ladies dropping in. And who ever heard of ladies in a monastery?"

The ban does not extend to entertainers taking part in any function within the club.

Wales Isn't Invited to Ingrid's Ball!

London, June 14 (AP))—London's tea time gossipers had a shock today when it was officially learned that the Prince of Wales would not be present at the ball of the Swedish Legation tonight in honor of Princess Ingrid of Sweden.

Rumors of a possible engagement announcement of the two popular eligible royal "children," seemed to have been given a definite quietus with the issuance of the guest list. It was said at the Swedish legation the Prince of Wales had not even been invited, only Prince George, youngest son of the British royal family, who regretted he was unable to attend.

The feature of the ball, which will be one of the high lights of the London season, will be a dance program containing nothing but waltzes. At a recent party Princess Ingrid was overheard saying she liked the waltz better than any dance, so fox trots have all been eliminated for the party, where everything is being done for the pleasure of the Swedish princess.

YALE CENTER, CHUM, DYING AFTER CRASH

Springfield, June 14 (INS)—Two Yale students, one of them a prominent athlete, were injured, probably fatally, at Southwick, in a motor crash on the college highway here today, when a new roadster in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a motor truck.

Fred Loesser, of New Haven, star Yale center, and William Robbins of Sewickley, Pa., were the men injured. Both were removed to the Noble Hospital at Westfield. Both Loesser and Robbins were unconscious when extricated from the wreck of the roadster which the former had been driving. Hospital physicians pronounced the injuries of both men serious.

The pair were on their way to the commencement exercises of Smith College at Northampton. The roadster sideswiped the truck after colliding with the rear end and crashed into a heavy timber boundary fence at the side of the road.

to the United States from the Irish Free State, is the brother who will arrive in Boston.

John J. White, chief engineer at the Dudley st. municipal building in Roxbury, is the man who will greet him.

During that long interval the Irish diplomat has changed his name from White to MacWhite because the latter cognomen is what his friends have always called him.

As a boy he was called "Mike" White and when the term, through constant use came to sound more and more like one word, "Mikewhite," and then "MacWhite," the man who is now one of Ireland's leading diplomats accepted the inevitable and made the designation official.

Never since they parted on the Emerald Isle have the brothers laid eyes on each other. They have been in communication, of course, but they never have had the opportunity to meet.

After arriving in Boston, John went to school and then worked at several jobs before entering the employ of the city, first as laborer. Gradually he worked into better posts, until now he is one of the veterans in city service.

Accompanying him to the South Station tonight for the reunion will be his wife, also an Irish girl, and daughter, Eleanor.

From the terminal the brothers will go to John's home in Hamilton st., Dorchester, where the diplomat will be accorded a reception by friends of the brother and by representatives of Irish organizations.

The Free State minister will attend the races at the Brookline Country Club over the holiday week-end.

of larceny and embezzlement, and there was no talk by Reading of staving off proceedings by Dist. Atty. Rugg of Worcester.

Q.—Did I say I never lost a case while I was district attorney of Middlesex County. A.—No.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Frederick W. Mansfield, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, Stearns admitted that on the first day, November 10, he was in Reading's private office only five minutes.

On the second day he said that he spent an hour and a half or two hours in the office, although the conference lasted nearly all day. He was there, he said, to prepare and write the escrow agreement.

The next witness was Francis B. Garland of the law firm of Hurlburt, Jones & Hall of 53 State st. He testified he talked with Reading on January 26 or 27 relative to claims made by Attorney Frank Ryan of Worcester, representing stockholders of the United L. A. W.

The witness said Ryan called him on the telephone and asked him to handle the case. Garland said he would first investigate, and was referred to Reading as a director of the L. A. W. and counsel. As a result of the information he received from Reading and from Atty. Gaskill of Worcester to whom the attorney-general referred him, the witness said he notified Ryan there were no grounds to proceed on.

Under cross-examination the witness said he did not know at the time an agreement was about to be effected between the United L. A. W. and Boston subsidiaries. He said Reading told him he was going to insist on the parent company paying subsidiaries, but did not say what methods he was using.

Rose Levine of 53 Garden st., Boston, for 10 years Reading's secretary, was called and identified a transcript of notes which she testified she made at the conference between Wolfe and her employer.

Under cross-examination the witness said it was her custom to destroy her notes within two weeks.

Raymond R. McGee, an attorney of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., said he was a member of the Deemo club of New York and chairman of the local board of governors in 1927. He said he first met Reading on October 18, the day before the conference at which Monjar was ousted.

MONJAR NOT THREATENED

The witness said Reading discussed amendments to the constitution, the use of power by Monjar, the financial status of the company and the depletion of funds. He recalled Reading's interrogation of Monjar and declared Monjar was not threatened, and there was no talk of prosecution or the serving of warrants.

He said Monjar's attitude indicated he realized his position and was willing to accept all suggestions made by Reading. He stated Reading's attitude was not belligerent, but conservative and businesslike. The witness identified certain passages in the record of the meeting.

EXTRA JAIL TERM SAVES HIM $500

Given the choice of a year in jail or nine months plus $500 fine, Nathan Snyder of Boston chose to serve the full year in jail after appearing today in Superior Court before Judge Fosdick, on complaint of failing to make promised restitution on larceny charges.

Snyder, who was the youthful promoter of debates between Clarence Darrow and ex-Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading, and between "Pussyfoot" Johnson and Dudley Field Malone, had earlier promised to pay back part of $2800 he was charged with stealing. Six counts of larceny were held against him and one charge of uttering a false check. The complainants were E. E. Whiting and Harry B. Williams.

Father Held in $2000 for Abandoning Boy

Morrisville, Vt., June 14—Ralph Noyes of Montgomery was given a hearing at Lamoille County court on the charge of abandoning his three-year-old son in the road near Eden on Wednesday morning. Noyes pleaded not guilty and was placed under $2000 bail, which he furnished. He will probably be tried next Wednesday. His son is being cared for by the family of Jailer Fred Crowell.

BOSTON FLIER'S ALTITUDE MARK SETS RECORD

Boston's first official airplane record has been made by Lieut. C. H. Spencer, sales manager for the Curtiss Flying Service of New England, it was revealed today when the bureau of standards at Washington issued notice that Spencer reached 18,671 feet in his altitude flight two weeks ago.

The ceiling touched by Lieut. Spencer bettered by 2171 feet the record of OX5 motored airplanes set up last December at Schenectady airport by "Red" Devereaux.

Lieut. Spencer, in his Sunday flight that attracted thousands of spectators to the Boston Airport, used a Curtiss-Robin cabin monoplane and for 2 hours and 15 minutes battled for height far above the clouds. He flew for more than an hour without seeing the ground, and when a hole in the clouds permitted a view of the earth he discovered he was over Marlboro. Another time he was above Gloucester, trying to get a final few feet out of the wartime water-cooled OX-5 motor.

At the ceiling, Lieut. Spencer found 2 degrees below zero temperature, but he was fairly warm in the cabin of the sturdy little Robin.

On the way down, after fighting for 30 minutes to get another 50 feet, Spencer looped the loop 14 times to break the monotony of the descent.

The altimeter in the Robin read 17,500 feet, but the instrument was more than a thousand feet short of the true height reached, as the sealed barograph reading showed.

SOVIET INVADES MANCHURIA

Shanghai, June 14 (AP)—An unofficial Russian report from Harbin, Manchuria, today said Soviet troops had entered Khailer, Manchuria, on the Chinese Eastern Railway, about 100 miles east of Manchouli. The movements were understood to be in reprisal for Chinese raids on Soviet consulates in Manchuria May 28.

A Chinese press dispatch from Harbin, quoting well informed sources, says Soviet authorities had increased their military forces on the Siberian border opposite Manchouli to 15,000 men. The force included 5000 cavalry.

Another report said Russians had ousted 50 Chinese merchants in Russian territory close to the Siberian-Manchurian border.

3 RULES MADE FOR FREIGHT TRAINS

The state commission on public utilities today established three requirements on the manning of freight trains on the railroads of the state.

The recommendations are based on the 1912 recommendations of the board of railroad commissioners, which previously had not the force of law.

Here are the requirements:

1—All freight trains operated on main line tracks and all freight trains operated on branch tracks for a distance of five miles or more shall be provided with at least two trainmen.

2—All freight trains while using the opposite main track for the purpose of allowing trains to pass, or for the purpose of setting out and taking in cars, where a trainman is required to protect the opposite track, shall be provided with at least three trainmen.

3—All light engines operated for a distance of 10 or more miles shall be provided with a trainman.

The regulations do not apply in cases of emergency.

On petition of J. C. Mahoney, chairman of the legislative board, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, complaining that trains are improperly manned, the commission declines to issue an order.

'OUST RASKOB' IS BOX'S PLEA

Washington, June 14 (AP)—Democrats of the country were urged today by Representative Box of Texas, assistant House Democratic leader, to take their party control out of the hands of John J. Raskob, chairman of the National Committee.

In his second speech on the subject since the last presidential election, Box, who supported Alfred E. Smith as the Democratic presidential candidate, charged Raskob and his associates were seeking to change the party into an instrument of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and make it merely "the organization of the liquor and anti-restriction blocs."

Asserting that there was "no profession that Mr. Raskob is anything but a Republican of the high finance type with no interest in Democratic principles," Box declared Raskob was seeking to destroy the Democratic party "so that it cannot soon become a dangerous opponent of his own party."

BIG ROUND OF HOSPITALITY FOR GUESTS AT COUNTRY CLUB RACES

Society 'Colors' to Represent Many Boston Favorites.

BY THEIR SILKS YOU SHALL KNOW THEM—at the races tomorrow. And I'm not speaking of the silken sartorial display which society will provide from boxes and gallery, but of the registered "colors," which will bring honor and glory to many Boston owners of horses running at the Country Club tomorrow and Monday. Society, with her favorites, distinguished by brilliant silks, will watch their performances around the course eagerly.

AND IT HAS COLORS THAT intrigued the great gathering at the fairways yesterday, watching the last "schooling" of local favorites before the big events. Mrs. Sumner Pingree, whose enthusiasm for racing is so contagious, watched for the silver and black halves, the silver and black sleeves and black cap that distinguished the entries from Flying Horse Farm at Hamilton. And Miss Betty Barrel and Miss Frances Goodwin, the prideful owners of Eastern Noble, hailed the Augustus F. Goodwin colors, yellow with green sleeves and yellow cap. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., has mauve with green sleeves and green cap for the Essex stables.

HAROLD FOWLER, WHO brought over his green with white cross sashes and hite cap from New York; Hugh Bancroft, Jr., with white, red and black hoop, white sleeves and red and black cap, and William Almy, Jr., entries with light blue, orange sleeves and cap, all contribute to the brilliant assemblage of silks. Still other important colors are entered by Samuel E. Peabody with black and white squares, red sleeves and cap, and by Bayard Warren with maroon and cherry halves, cherry cap. Mrs. Homer Loring's silks are of white with red diamond in front and back.

BUT THE GLORY OF THE silks is not greater than the hospitality extended by hundreds of fashionable homes for the races. Once again Boston becomes the social hub for the next three days, with many distinguished guests and a round of social gayety that makes the races the magnet for the elite of many cities. At their Beverly Farms summer place, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Adams Shaw are having Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Clark of New York and the Augustus Goodwin country home, Brae Seaside, is to be filled with several out-of-towners. The Goodwin dinner at The Country Club, by the way, has been changed from Monday evening to Saturday evening.

IT ALWAYS TAKES THE COterie gathering for luncheon at Mrs. Charles Weld's on the first day of the races to make everyone feel thoroughly "at home," and society has this affair underscored on her date book for Saturday noon. Mrs. George S. West keeps open house on Monday for the guests, and Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall entertains 30 at luncheon on Monday. Her guests include Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hemenway, Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson, Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis, Jr. At the festive board of Mr. and Mrs. Gorham Brooks, Monday, will be Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld, Mr. and Mrs. William Burnham, Mr. and Mrs. John Bolt and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Emery. Mrs. George Peabody Gardner has her brother, William Grosvenor, up from Newport that day when she has a luncheon for a score of Providence friends.

A SIMPLE GOWN, BUT A lovely one, adorned Miss Louise Colburn Parker as she stood before the Leslie Lindsay Memorial chapel altar in Emmanuel to be joined to William L. Brookfield in wedlock at high noon today. The traditional ivory satin gown made in Princess mode with long train was charming with frothy tulle veil falling from a fitted lace cap over the bride's dark tresses. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies as she walked down the aisle on the arm of her brother, James Reals Parker, who gave her in marriage. The Rev. D. Cummins, assisted by the Rev. O. S. Drury of St. Paul's School, officiated.

Mrs. Sumner Pingree Miss Betty Barrel

Wherever horses race one is sure to find Mrs. Sumner Pingree rooting for Flying Horse Farm entries running under her silver and black colors. Miss Betty Barrel, joint owner of Eastern Noble, was also of the race-fan gallery that watched the final "schooling" of the horses yesterday at Brookline.

A BEVY OF SIX LOVELY bridesmaids, frocked in orchid chiffon and her maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Koster of New York, in jade chiffon, formed the summer color symphony which preceded the popular young Junior League bride to the altar. A reception at The Country Club followed the ceremony and then the couple slipped away immediately for their honeymoon in Europe. They are to live in New York at 218 East 73d st., after November 1. Mrs. James H. Reals of New York, the bride's grandmother, came over for the wedding.

The Curious Quizzer

Charlestown Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

Do you think the Government should authorize payment of $25,000 to relatives of innocent persons killed by armed prohibition agents?

MISS LILLIAN I. PHILLIPS, Monument st.—From recent newspaper accounts I see that the killing of respectable law-abiding citizens by federal prohibition law enforcers are becoming frequent occurrences. In a short time I have read of five innocent persons who were victims of dry agents. If these officers are found guilty of taking the lives of persons who were innocent because they thought they were bootleggers, the officers should be held for first degree murder. The smallest consolation the government could offer to the mothers or to the wives of the martyred ones would be a large sum of money. Even $25,000 for the wanton taking of a life would be poor consolation.

JOHN M. DAY, Vine st.—Get your man," appears to be the slogan of some of the hard-boiled rum chasers. Innocent or guilty of having a bottle of liquor on your person or in your automobile, you are suspected in certain parts of the country until the prohibition agent makes a thorough search of you or of your car. If they signal for you to stop and you don't happen to hear them, or you think it is the command of highwaymen and start to make a getaway, it is now the habit of these sharpshooters to fire at you from behind. Too many innocent persons have been killed by federal agents. It is about time the government realized that families of such victims should be granted a large sum of money in each case.

MISS MARY L. HAFEY, Madison Ave.—If government prohibition agents, in trying to stop illegal liquor traffic, mistakenly take the life of an innocent person, it is good logic to expect the government to repay as far as possible that person's relatives who loved him. Some of the men serving as prohibition officers are not fit for the position. They shoot first and make an investigation afterwards. In many cases, as everybody knows, they discover that the man shot was an honest business man. More care should be taken in selecting officers for prohibition work, and there should be a law passed to prevent shooting unless the suspected person threatens the officer with a loaded revolver. I hope the government will pay $25,000 to the families of anybody killed by irresponsible government officials.

FRED DAY, Russell st.—Take away the guns from prohibition agents in search of contraband liquor and there will be no killing of innocent persons in a partial list of casualties which I read the other day, there were more than a dozen innocent citizens who lost their lives from bullets fired by prohibition agents. Perhaps if the government had to pay $25,000, as I think it should do, for each life their paid "pussyfooters" took, there would not be so many shootings of innocent people. Unless the life of a prohibition agent is threatened by a known bootlegger, there is no reason for the agent to pull a gun.

DEMAND RELIEF FROM HALLET ST. DUMP

Hallet st dump in Neponset, nicknamed "Old Mount Vesuvius," because of the numerous fires there, is spouting flame and smoke again and sending forth odors.

The dump has been a subject of controversy for more than two years. Conditions recently have reached such a state that abutting firms and property owners have risen in united protest. They demand relief. They charge that the health authorities have been lax in enforcing regulations.

They complain of the dump as a fire hazard and a menace to public health. They claim a high mesh fence should be erected along the Southern artery to prevent papers from blowing and that greater care should be exercised in the refuse dumped there.

HOMES MENACED

It has become a serious neighborhood problem. The last fire on Wednesday, which kept fire apparatus from Neponset and Peabody sq. and Ashmont busy two hours, brought matters to a head. The State highway was tied up for a time by dense black smoke which troubled motorists. Sparks were carried across Neponset ave. by a high wind. Homes were menaced.

The flames leaped to within a few yards of a reservation where $50,000 worth of new automobiles are on exhibition. Housekeepers complain that they have been routed from their beds by dump fires on many occasions.

The firemen have been called out to extinguish more than 100 fires in a year. That is why the dump is called "Old Vesuvius."

Mrs. Catherine Barrie, who conducts a store at Hallet and Marsh sts., said:

"Many of those fires have been set. Somebody dumped fish heads and debris from cesspools there until neighbors complained to the board of health. We don't get the stench on this side as bad as they do over on Minot st. My friend, Mrs. Florence Wiggin, who lives at 32 Minot st. and is a trained nurse, said the odor was a distinct nuisance and injurious to health."

Mrs. F. J. Quinn, 136 Marsh st., said:

"We are too far away to be bothered by papers, but we do get a wretched odor at times and droves of flies. They dump things they shouldn't have there."

James Thom, 31 Hallet st., owner of a new single house on the corner, said:

SUGGESTS FENCE

"They ought to have a fence of hen wire or something to stop paper blowing across Southern Artery. There have been so many fires, my uncle, George Thom, 18 Minot pl., just back of me here, has been kept busy pulling fire alarms."

Earl Noyes, who owns the dining car at the junction of Neponset ave. and Southern Artery, said:

"The dump is a general nuisance. The odors are objectionable and they blow so many fires there the firemen are kept on the jump. Quite an expense to the city."

J. F. Duby, owner of a new machine shop on Southern Artery, said:

"The dump is a nuisance. We are not bothered so much by blowing papers as we have been by odors. If they insist on dumping such material there they should be compelled to cover it at once."

George Cribby, 147 Marsh st., who has charge of the dump, said:

"A fence would help me because it would keep out trespassers who set fires. I've complained to the police and they said a fence was the only solution. I'm trying to care for the dump the best I can, but parties come all hours of the night and dump things."

SAYS FIRE SET

James H. Riley of J. H. Riley & Co., plumbers, 10 Minot st., owner of the property said:

"I realize there has been a lot of kicking, but there are two sides to this issue. It's impossible to stop parties stealing in and dumping at night. Some of the neighbors have obtained all their kindling wood from that dump. They don't tell the good side.

"I've done all I could and I've decided to close the dump. I've reached about the end of the filling point. Understand this was never a dump for ashes. That's why I never went to the expense of erecting a fence along the artery. If I had been an ash dump I would have had to put up a fence under the law.

"Wednesday's fire was set. I've put up 'No Dumping' signs. The man I hired to take charge has made a good living off that dump, but I'm through."

4 BOY SCOUTS' PLEA FREES EX-COP

After four Boy Scouts whom he injured last month when driving an automobile while intoxicated urged mercy, Philip T. Burke of Sacramento pl., Cambridge, former policeman, today was freed by Judge Fosdick of the Middlesex Criminal Superior Court, upon payment of fines on four different counts.

Burke was fined $10 for intoxication, $100 for driving while intoxicated, $100 for driving so as to endanger the public, and $10 for driving without headlights. He pleaded guilty on all counts and paid the total of $220.

Last May 28, Burke while in uniform crashed into a troop of Boy Scouts, injuring four slightly. He lost his job as a result. Today the scouts urged court clemency because they considered the man had been sufficiently punished by losing his job.

Judge Fosdick in passing sentence said that this was a serious offense, but that the court was justified in giving fines because of circumstances. He said the man had lost his job and had no previous court record.

Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher urged mercy on the grounds that five years ago Burke had been struck a severe blow on his head while on police duty, affecting his mentality.

Tallahassee, Fla., June 14—Horse racing promoters received a decided set-back in this state when the state senate, by a vote of 17 to 12, killed a bill which if passed would have put the question of legalized racing and pari-mutuel gambling at race tracks up to the residents of the state in the form of a referendum. This is believed to settle the gambling question in the state for the present year at least.

$300 MONTHLY NOT ENOUGH FOR MRS. KIP

New York, June 14 (INS)—Up goes the ante for Kip Rhinelander. His dusky wife, who read reports that her wealthy husband again was trying to be rid of her, charged to the front with the announcement that $300 a month just wasn't enough for her.

Therefore, while Kip lives in Reno and plans to part permanently from the wife he tried vainly to shake once before, Alice has set some legal machinery in motion herself, it was learned today.

Her attorney, William D. Cunningham, said:

"Well, it looks like Kip was trying to pull a fast one. But he is not using his head. His Nevada divorce action is going to add at least a couple of points to our case.

"Abandonment and cruelty—those are the things he had aided us with—and if Alice doesn't get more than $300 per I'll miss my guess."

PARTY GOES ON WEEK-END TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

By ALBERT L. FURTH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, June 14—Just a week-end jaunt to California!

That's exactly what's going to take place for a party of men and women leaving Grand Central Station at 6 o'clock this evening, on the inaugural trip of the air-rail service of New York Central, Universal Aviation Corporation and the Santa Fe Railway.

For that group, including the writer, will be in Los Angeles at 9 o'clock Monday morning, in plenty of time for business, or whatever they want to do.

1000 MILES BY PLANE.

This unprecedented speed for a regularly established daily service from coast-to-coast is made possible by a 1000-mile span by airplane, from Cleveland to Garden City, Kas.

The departure of the inaugural party will be celebrated by informal ceremonies at 5:15 o'clock on the east gallery of Grand Central terminal.

Mayor James J. Walker, Lieut.-Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central, and a number of other distinguished persons will take part.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT ABOARD

Heading the party of travelers are Graham B. Grosvenor, president of the Aviation Corporation, of which Universal is a subsidiary, and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrant, new Washington counsel for Aviation Corporation.

Just before the Southwestern limited pulls out at 6 o'clock, Mayor Walker is to give Mrs. Willebrandt a bottle. It will contain water, taken from the Atlantic Ocean, and will be emptied into the Pacific upon the party's arrival there.

Institute New Foresters Court

With the members of the high standing committee in attendance, a new court of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters was instituted in St. James Hall, Appleton st., Arlington Heights. High Chief Ranger James A. Donovan presided at the ceremonies, which included obligation and institution of the court.

The charter members include Mrs. Helen C. Abboud, Alice R. Cooney, Michael N. Dacey, Thomas Gilgan, Christopher Horne, Henry E. Morales, Mrs. Norma F. McNamee, Mary A. O'Connell, Evelyn F. Peterson, Katherina R. Reardon, Annie Sheehan, Katherine A. Sheehan, Annie M. Sullivan, Sarah A. Sullivan, Genevieve E. Sweeney, Marie Sweeney, Mrs. Elizabeth T. White and Mrs. Margaret W. Wood.

Big Film Returns to State Theater

Responding to an avalanche of requests for the return of the film "The Broadway Melody," Manager Joseph H. Brennan of Loew's State Theater announces that he has arranged for the screening of this all-talking, singing and dancing triumph for next Sunday only.

This brief engagement is made possible by the fact that "The Trial of Mary Dugan," in which Norma Shearer makes her initial bow in an all-talkie film this week, is not permitted to be shown on Sunday.

It is more likely that "The Trial of Mary Dugan" will record one of the most profitable weeks in the history of Loew's State despite the fact that it is scheduled for six days only.

Ethel Barrymore Is Cast in New Play

BANKER URGES CUT ON EARNED INCOME TAX

Registering a vigorous protest against the income tax, John G Lonsdale, president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., of St. Louis, told more than 300 New England bankers in convention at the New Ocean House in Swampscott today that the tax issue was one requiring immediate attention

"The tax on earned incomes deserves attention he said, "because in its present status it imposes a penalty on thrift Fortunately, I note that President Hoover has gone on record as favoring legislation for earned incomes to head the list of relief laws

PRESSURE NEEDED.

"However with vast public expenditures and other monetary drains facing the treasury, this reduction may prove to be one of those will-o-the-wisp hopes unless pressure is brought to bear. With bankers' groups, such as yours, demanding equity and fairness, the time for definite and favorable action is being speeded.

"The income tax on corporations also is too high. Such a tax siphons out corporation revenue and the continuation of this unjustifiably high levy is defensible only in the narrowest conception of expediency Before the federal tax scheme become crystallized under the pressure of probable demands for increased revenue this unjust discrimination should be removed

ACCEPT CHALLENGE.

"You bankers and other business men are accepting the challenge Our leaders realize that the right of taxation is a sacred trust that comes next to a man's liberty," President Lonsdale said.

Digressing for a few minutes to convey a "debt of gratitude we [illegible] the midwest and all other sections of America owe to New England," the speaker continued:

"Taxes are the sinews of the commonwealth They provide the revenue whereby our government national state and local [illegible] for our benefit and [illegible] Taxes increase with the [illegible] activities of [illegible] [illegible] population [illegible] for maladjustment [illegible] tion grow greater [illegible] becomes urgent for [illegible]

STUDY REAL ECONOMY

"We must study whether tax moneys are being expended wisely and with real economy In other words, it is necessary to investigate whether we are getting a dollar's worth for our tax dollar Among the growing responsibilities of business is to see that taxes are equitable and that, once in the coffers of the government they are not squandered With trained minds digging beneath the surface and analyzing basic facts the outlook for improved management of public financial affairs is more promising.

POWER MERGER TURNED DOWN IN MAINE

The proposed merger of the water companies of Maine backed by Boston financiers, was turned down by the Public Utilities Commission of the Pine Tree State

The commission's decision is regarded as a decisive victory for the people The plan was to consolidate 15 water companies in that State with the corporation known as the Maine State Water and Electric Companies, of which I C Chase of Boston is president and R W Gilbert of Boston is treasurer

The merger was looked upon as another move by the Power Trust It was rejected on the ground that it was detrimental to public interest

We cannot see any sound economic reason to support the plan proposed says the commission in its finding and believing that its operation would not be beneficial to the public interest, but instead would be detrimental thereto, we find that the prayer of the petitioners should be denied and the several petitions dismissed

"The holding company which seeks by this consolidation proceedings to take over all these other companies and then by our order to become a public utility proceeded as has been shown in evidence as soon as it was organized or shortly thereafter, to [illegible] that which it had a right to do as a holding company, but what [illegible] could not have done if it had been a public utility, viz, to put [illegible] stock of utilities [illegible] securities for the purpose [illegible] necessary neces[illegible] funds therefor, without com[illegible] authority

Father and mother, sisters and brothers in Roxbury are taking up most of Sam's time while he is here He also paid a visit today to the Harry Burroughs Newsboys Foundation. "Couldn't miss seeing the boys," he said.

HEALY SEEKS SOMERVILLE MAYORALITY

Arthur D. Healey of 47 Adams st., Somerville, a well-known attorney with offices in his native city and Boston, is a Democratic candidate for mayor of Somerville.

Healey won more than ordinary political attention last fall in the Congressional election when he met defeat at the hands of Congressman Charles L. Underhill by 132 votes in the first count of votes in the district, carrying Somerville by a plurality of 2000 votes over his Republican opponent.

To the Citizens of Somerville:

In response to the many urgent requests from voters representing all sections of the city, I have decided after careful consideration to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the office of Mayor.

It is my sincere belief that there is a strong sentiment among the citizens of our city that a long, unbroken line of Republican administrations have failed to keep step with the march of progress and have lacked the foresight to provide for the necessities of a growing community. As a consequence, there is a virile demand for a change in administration.

Boston Postoffice Still at Old Stand

Postmaster Charles R. Gow stated today that some of the post office patrons are evidently of the opinion that the central station located in the old federal building has been removed to the Young's hotel building. This is not the case, however, as the central station is still in the old federal building and will not be moved until the quarters in the Young's hotel building are ready for occupancy.

High-Test No-Knock

IT'S the "borderland" mixture in gasoline that causes most of the knocking, fouling, crank-case dilution and loss of power.

By carrying Beacon refining processes an important step farther than usual, we take out of COLONIAL GAS all of this keroseney "borderland"; which we then sell for heating purposes, never as gasoline.

Homemaking Course For All Girls Urged

Mrs. May Bliss Kimball (Bachrach Photo)

This is to be combated in a campaign planned for the fall by the Division of Home Economics Teaching of the General Federation of Women's Club, of which Mrs. Joseph C. Gawler of Yakima, Washington, is the chairman.

A movement to stimulate interest in homemaking education that will make it possible for all girls to have it instead of the less than 50 per cent now profiting by it is under way, sponsored by the General Federation, and will be actively decided upon at specially planned conference under the auspices of this division.

In a few days now, Mrs. Gawler will confer with representatives of the several Home Economics Bureaus of the government, and with the American Home Economics Association, at a meeting called by her and which will be held at the General Federation headquarters in Washington.

Before the opening of the next club year, it is the expressed hope of Mrs. Gawler that every clubwoman in the country, whether or not she has thought herself concerned, will have some participation in this great "home-training for girls" movement.

A little canvass of mothers is now being made by State home economics teaching chairmen. Mrs. Gawler reported, recently at the Biennial Council in Swampscott, that the attitude toward homemaking training for their own daughters may be obtained. If there are mothers in the country who oppose such training for their daughters the General Federation wants to know about it, and more particularly their reasons for such adverse acceptance of it.

TO MEET IN HUB

When the truth about the mothers is ascertained the Federation home economics division will start on the educators, against whom some charges are held.

The mothercraft work, under the direction of Mrs. May Dickinson Bliss Kimball, its founder, and Massachusetts State chairman of the department, is striding forward, already an integral part of the public school instruction in a number of states.

That every girl should be given such training, that the American Home might become the foundation of the American government, is the ultimate end of this division.

Better mothers of tomorrow mean a better country in the future, members decided in this work have often repeated.

The national convention of the Home Economics Association of America comes to Boston on July 1, and for the following four days will devote all-day sessions to the discussion of the subject.

THE WOMAN PATRIOT

That the General Federation of Women's Clubs is being closely scrutinized by this organ, published to defeat feminism and socialism, was revealed in an interview with its president, Miss Mary C. Kilbreth of Washington.

In the capital she investigates every legislative measure pertinent to those two issues and prints the facts in The Woman Patriot.

At a luncheon-talk in the Hotel Brunswick, to which some of Boston's finest and most brilliant came, Miss Kilbreth brought "The Latest from Washington."

Her scrutiny of the General Federation, she said, was solely along legislative lines. When they meddled in the government, then she got busy and "looked into it."

This organ is out to defeat feminism.

Of particular importance was the part played by the Woman Patriot in the dissolution of the Women's Auxiliary to the War Department, which sprung up before the completion of the term of Secretary of War Davis.

That such a committee of women, one of whom was to be our assistant in every Army Corps Area, is not a matter of general information, but its defeat was a victory for the anti-radical groups of which The Woman Patriot is one.

FINANCED BY RUSSIA

Miss Kilbreth told of many camps in New York City, somewhere near West Point, where "the red flag goes up every morning." That any of these red camps exist in Massachusetts Miss Kilbreth did not know, but she said she did not doubt but what "there might be."

The financing of these camps, she said, has been directly traced to radical organizations in Russia "We are going to go after these camps," she stressed.

Miss Kilbreth came from her Long Island summer home to tell her story. She holds a distinct position in Washington since her work is unpaid and unsalaried.

To Miss Kilbreth, the "poor American husband is a beast of burden."

In the audience there were Mrs. George B. Wallace, of Fitchburg; Mrs. Henry W. Rogers, Mrs. Frederic Cunningham, Mrs. Matthew Sullivan, of Ponkapoag; Mrs. Robert Sturdevant, Mrs. John Balch, Mrs. John Fremont Hill, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray and her daughter, Katherine; Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, who is secretary-treasurer of The Woman Patriot, and Mrs. Francis Slattery, president of the League of Catholic Women's Organizations.

Mrs. Slattery told of doing a little campaigning of her own in that she is trying to get every president of every Catholic woman's organization in the country to acquaint herself with The Woman Patriot.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Mrs. Henry Randolph Brigham is to entertain the presidents of the local leagues of Middlesex and Essex counties at a luncheon today at the Mayflower Club. Mrs. Louis C. Hunter of Cambridge has arranged the program for the conference and is to conduct the discussion on how to present league methods of political education through practical demonstration.

GENERAL FEDERATION

Western Pennsylvania has a Blind Women's Club and the achievements of this noble group are the talk of the two and one-half million clubwomen of the country.

It is called the Progressive Blind Woman's Club and was organized in 1912, affiliating itself with the General Federation in 1924.

The promotion of the physical, social and intellectual welfare of blind women and the assistance in providing, equipping and maintaining a home for blind women are the objects of this remarkable organization.

In 1927 the plan for a home for blind women materialized and was located in Western ave., Pittsburgh The club has a list of 41 active members, seven non-resident members, 26 associate members and three honorary members.

LOSS OF POOR CHILDREN BOAT RIDE LOOMS

Ten thousand poor children and orphans of Boston face the loss of their annual boat rides and picnics this summer because of opposition to the picnic grounds at Rainsford Island.

Opponents of the Rainsford Island site say the voyage is made through a dangerous, winding channel, and several compromise trips have been suggested. A conference to decide the matter will be held this afternoon between Mayor Nichols, Penal Commissioner Phillip A. Chapman and Institutions Commissioner William S. Kinney.

Chapman has charge of the Randidge fund, from which the money for expenses is derived, and Kinney has charge of the islands owned by the city.

A compromise boat trip to Long Island, proposed by several officials, is said to have met with opposition from some of the resident officials on the island, who voiced disapproval at having all those children bathe in front of our homes."

BIG DISAPPOINTMENT.

As a result of several conferences, various other trips have been suggested, including a land trip to the Charles river, West Roxbury.

The children, who have looked forward to this trip since they made one last year, are the orphans and poor children in various religious and fraternal homes throughout the city. Trips are made daily except Saturdays during July and August.

Expenses of the trips, including a lunch for the children, come from the interest on the Randidge fund, provided in 1896 by the will of George L. Randidge, the city treasurer.

Annually the children have enjoyed the salty breezes of Boston harbor and the picnic lunch and entertainment at Rainsford Island. It has been a great treat in otherwise dull lives.

BOAT RIDES THE FUN

Through opposition, however, they may be forced to forego the pleasantest part of the outing—the boat ride. The compromise trip to the Charles river at Sandy Beach, in the rear of the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at West Roxbury, means a bus trip or a street car ride—nothing to compare with a trip over the bounding main.

Scientists Paint on Bottom of Ocean

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14 (AP)—Painting pictures on the bottom of the ocean with oil paints on zinc plates, walking the floor of the Sargasso sea with spiny sea urchins, giant snails and the octopi, are among the tales brought back today by the Buffalo Museum science staff.

Mrs. Charles A. Fish, wife of the director of the museum, devotes most of her time to the study of young deep-sea fish and to diving.

She paced acres of ocean bottom, with a diving helmet for a hat. To prove it she has brought back numerous photographs.

The expedition was financed by the Frances Hubbard Larkin fund for the Hall of Invertebrates and the Jacob F. Schoellkopf fund for the Hall of Evolution.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment, and the best are advertised daily in the Pay Rent column.

Two Acquitted in $38,000 Theft

Abbott Is Elected Y. M. C. A. President

The annual meeting of the directors and managers of the Young Men's Christian Association today resulted in the election of T. Grafton Abbott as president, succeeding Arthur S. Johnson, who will serve as chairman of the board.

T. G. Abbott

In accepting office Abbott expressed the responsibility he felt. "I have been led to accept this position primarily because of the assurance of support from leaders in the association," he said. "It is through these men that the Y. M. C. A. will continue to occupy the place it does and should fill in the life of Boston."

BARBER SHOP INVESTIGATOR

Public Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow today appointed Barney DeLuca of Dorchester as special investigator to assist the health department in its investigation of the barbering trade in this state.

DeLuca's duties will be to delve into the training of barbers, practices in the trade and to aid in discovering alleged infections contracted in barber shops.

The commissioner today renewed his request to the public for information, in writing, on specific cases of disease caught in barber shops.

The probe of barbering resulted from several bills filed with the Legislature asking that the trade be regulated and barbers licensed.

Roxbury Boy's Trip to Be Film Actor Nipped by Cop

Springfield, June 14—Hopes for a career as a sheik of the silver screen on the part of 13-year-old Mark Holmes of Roxbury were nipped in the bud today when a railroad officer plucked him from a blind baggage car at the local station.

Mark expressed his disgust at the interference with his plans, saying he had cut short his schooling in order to get an early start for Hollywood. His parents were notified and told police to hold Mark until their arrival.

RAID $200,000 LIQUOR PLANT

Buffalo, N. Y., June 14 (AP)—A big liquor plant, valued at $200,000, was raided here today by federal dry agents under the leadership of Prohibition Administrator Andrew McCampbell. Three men were arrested. Agents said they would demand bail be set at $25,000 each.

In the plant a formulae for denaturing alcohol, said to have been discarded by the Government a year ago, was found.

Bootleg liquor, made from recooked alcohol, and so-called "miniature" beer were made in the plant. Complete recooking, brewing and liquor cutting outfits were found.

THAW BALKS AT WILL CODICIL

Pittsburgh, June 14—Harry K. Thaw, named administrator in a codicil to his mother's will, which continued distributions to charities that shared her millions, stepped aside to avoid contest of the document, it was learned here today.

The codicil never will be filed, according to notice served on Registrar of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, by counsel for Harry Thaw.

Had the modifying document been filed, the man who was tried for killing Stanford White, architect, and for other charges, would have been co-administrator of an estate of more than $3,000,000, much of which will go to charities supported by Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw during her lifetime.

CHAPTER 5

IT was not at all what they had expected, this visit to the Girl With a Past, who murdered the King's English.

She led them through the house, standing proudly in each doorway calling attention to every piece of furniture, beaming with delight, explaining what she hoped to accomplish, begging their opinions in a half timid way.

Compared with their own dwellings this was a bit cheap, bearing somewhat the look of a place where the most has been made of little.

She talked about making onion soup for Steve and how she struggled over it.

The guests took their leave, wandering down the flagstones in a sort of daze, turning into the street before Jessie exploded.

"Of all the nerve! She must think we're prize dumb-doras handing us that cackle. Onion soup' Blah—it sounds like a new cuss-word! But what would you expect of a woman like that—"

"Oh, I don't know." Penelope was irritated and was willing to risk a quarrel with Jessie. "I don't think it was a line, ole dear. Bet you never made any onion soup."

'Really' But if you'll let me have your recipe, dear?"

"Tomorrow," Penelope snapped "I've got to rush over to market if you'll excuse me? Such a pleasant afternoon—"

All the Lakeview wives shook their heads and smiled mysteriously and predicted that Myrtle would not "last."

And meanwhile Myrtle went about her tasks, delighting in marketing, picking out the freshest vegetables, the choicest cuts of meat, planning the day's meals, her mind always was busy with the wonder of her great good fortune.

In a softly rolling limousine a man spread her fingers on his open palm, raised them to his lips slowly, gracefully kissing them one by one, watching her with his wise, ever so slightly aloof eyes. And, seeing red creep

WALKING ARSENAL JAILED

Called by police a "walking arsenal" because he had a loaded pistol in one pocket and a dirk in another, Stefano Tete, 44, of 136 Webster st., East Boston, today began serving a six months' jail sentence for participation in an assault with another man on two officers

Tete and Crescendo Imondi of Webster st. was stopped on that street early today by Patrolmen Michael Burns and John W. Campbell as suspicious characters. The two men resisted attempts to search then and Imondi slashed the coat of Campbell, also just grazing his arm.

Imondi is now in jail under $10,000 bonds, awaiting trial next Friday on a charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

In court today Tete was found guilty on two counts, one for carrying the revolver and the other for the knife. He accepted his two concurrent sentences of six months each and began serving time at once.

The officers testified that Tete thrust a hand in each pocket of his coat, and was prevented by Patrolman Burns from withdrawing his hands. A knife in one pocket and the pistol in the other, were found in the search.

Many Old Glories Waving in Boston

"Old Glory" whipped in the breeze today afloat and ashore. In full response to the proclamation of Gov. Allen, flags flew from hundreds of staffs throughout the state in observance of Flag Day.

In the harbor all craft at anchor flew the flag from the taffrail. This year's Flag Day was observed more fully than any in the past.

Boston University will graduate 1079 students in the Boston Arena Tuesday morning. The number is 62 more than the class graduated last year.

Of the 1079 diplomas to be granted 571 will go to men and 508 to women. Excluding the university's College of Practical Arts and Letters which is exclusively for women students, the number of male seniors throughout the university exceeds that of women by 149 this year.

The 1079 students hail from 39 states of the union and six foreign countries. The New England states head the list with 910 candidates. New York leads the other Eastern states with 31, while Ohio is next with 25. Canada, New Zealand Russia, Chile, Porto Rico, China and Japan are represented by candidate each.

HUGE STILL AND MASH SEIZED

Two thousand gallons of mash and a 250-gallon-capacity still were seized this forenoon at 44 Atwood st., Revere, by the police liquor squad. The still had been discovered last night by Sergt. John Sparkes who, with others, watched all night waiting for the owner to appear.

No one was on the premises at the time of the raid. The still is a large one, operated by steam and by a coke burner

No Fish Market Model on Bay State Medals

Our cod! . . . May (she, it, him) always be in the right; but our cod, right or wrong.—From "Apologies to Stephen Decatur."

Hook, line and sinker, the cod war broke today with the [illegible] that Massachusetts [illegible] and veterans of the fishing [illegible] don't know a cod [illegible]

The assertion was made by Robert H. Newcomb general manager of Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary, Inc., whose medals the first of which was presented to Gov. Allen carry an alleged codfish replica that is all wet according to fishermen.

On the medal also the word "Massachusetts" carries the old-fashioned form of [illegible] except for the final letter but the tercentenary business manager waved this away as a minor item and brought out old records of the colony to prove that the form used is in keeping with that of the ancient documents.

But the cod!

According to Newcomb, the tercentenary committee selected for its codfish pattern a cod pictured on a plate in the fish book written by Barton Warren Evermann, ichthyologist of the United States Fisheries, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., and included in the New Nature Library.

"That is a cod," declared Newcomb, "a fish that swims in Massachusetts Bay waters and a fish that composed the principal sustenance of the earliest settlers.

"The fish that arrive in Boston, if I may impress it upon the critics, are dead when seen in fish dealers' bins and windows and are all warped out of shape. The cod represented on the medal is the true cod."

Talk of Baseball Trades, With Day Left, Is Dying Down

MORRIS TO FACE GRAY TODAY

By NICK FLATLEY

THE trade winds are dying down in baseball. There are still murmurs of some Red Sox deal with the Yanks or Tigers, but the whisperers are losing hope. The lists close tomorrow. It would seem that trades would hardly hang fire until the last minute.

The Sox want material, but so do the other clubs. Dan Howley, here with his Browns, is anxious to get one more pitcher, and would talk turkey, but he admits that Carrigan and Quinn would want more than he could give away, for one of the Sox pitchers.

Daniel is very enthusiastic about his ball club, even though it dropped the first game here, after taking a plastering from the New York Yankees.

"We don't expect to win 'em all," bubbles Daniel. "But we will win plenty. My team is hustling, and ambitious. It has its bad moments, but gradually is smoothing out. We'll be in there right down to the finish."

Dan sells his own enthusiasm to his athletes. His team has been playing good baseball all spring, and enjoys road trips. The home fans in St. Looey have turned sour, and winning ball clubs don't draw a thing. The Cards cured them last fall in that well known series.

CHANCES of any Brown-Sox trade are remote. The local club wants hitting outfielders, and the Duke of Weymouth has none to spare. His fly chasers, with the exception of Manush, are not slugging, and Daniel will hang onto Heinie as long as he holds the job.

This St. Louis team has pretty good pitching, pretty good fielding and pretty good hitting. And it has very good spirit, which counts as much as anything else. Sam Gray, the Brownies leading pitcher, was due to work today. Sam is away to a wonderful start and is anxious to lead the pitchers.

The same Samuel is one of the best when he feels inclined, and Howley has managed to keep that feeling very much alive. Connie Mack had this pitcher for several years but finally turned him over to the Browns.

Big Ed Morris looked like Carrigan's best bet. Ed hasn't worked since Saturday and is anxious. He flourishes in hot weather, the burning sun reminding him of his Southern pitching days, when he used to work three times a week and do relief duty, also.

CARRIGAN'S infield, since Reeves has been parked on third again, and Rexan is back at second, has perked up remarkably. Soft hits are not drifting through these days and there's snap to the general work. Regan is smoother and faster at second than Gillis, while Reeves is much the best fielding third sacker Carrigan has tried out. He's a genius at spearing line drives.

Nariesky's fielding has picked up since speedier coworkers have come to his aid. This kid improves steadily, and shapes up like a young man who might make quite a name for himself. He packs a dangerous bat, even though he isn't hitting as often as he did when he was on his consecutive streak.

Bigelow is playing right, while Rothrock is healing up. Big Ike isn't any Harry Hooper, but he's wharfing the ball. He would be a real hitter, if he could be kept in there steadily. But lack of arm make that impossible. He does look like a fixture as pinch-hitter. He can paste right-handers, something after the gifted fashion of Bob Barrett, when southpaws are sharpshooting.

THE Sox can get an even break with the West by winning two of the next three with the Browns. That looks like a tough proposition but with Morris, Ruffing and MacFayden in line to work, it's not exactly impossible.

COLLEGE CREWS RACE TONIGHT

Madison, Wis., June 14 (AP)—A crew of sturdy oarsmen from the University of Washington will test Wisconsin's comeback possibilities in rowing tonight by racing teh Badgers over a two-mile route on Lake Mendota.

The race between the two varsity eights will be a tune up affair for the Poughkeepsie regatta, in which both are entries.

Twilight Leaguers in Two Games Tonight

By DICK McSWEENEY

A PAIR of games make up the Twilight League bill for this evening. Malden will go to Dorchester and Salem will oppose the Revere outfit on the latter's diamond.

Dorchester's pace setting clubs will have an opportunity to make its berth at the top of the league secure, inasmuch as Quincy and South Boston will be idle.

Both the South Boston and Quincy nines are pressing Dorchester hard and only sure-fire hitting and good pitching will save the latter club from the loss of its exalted position.

When Malden visits Dorchester tonight, it will have to solve the slants of Shuman, capable hurler of the locals.

MALDEN is having its troubles due to a change in the management of the club, but better things are expected of the team as soon as a few beneficial deals can be made.

Westland is slated to toss for Malden with Pass ready to step in if his services are needed.

Salem and Revere put on their battle at Revere. Salem will send Harrington to the mound. Sterling has drawn the Revere pitching assignment.

Manager Fred Mellin of the Roslindale team plans to strengthen the pitching power of his club.

He expects Frank Mullikan, Lawrence Academy hurling ace, Dixon of Boston College and Buckley of Providence College to join the pitching corps some time in the near future.

Mullikan had a great season at Lawrence Academy and is known among the scholastic sport followers as a youth who can clout as well as pitch.

FINLAY WELL UP IN TITLE GOLF

Montclair, N. J., June 14 (AP)—Bereft of three prime favorites, the metropolitan amateur golf championship entered the quarter-final round today with two college stars holding a good share of the limelight.

With the elimination of Eugene Homans of Englewood, N. J., the defending champion; Eddie Held of Lakeville, the medalist, and George Volpe, only scratch man in the metropolitan handicap list, the favorite's mantle has been draped on the joint shoulders of Phillips Finlay, long driving Harvard star and Maurice McCarthy, Georgetown's intercollegiate champion.

The luck of the draw, however, will prevent them from meeting in the finals for they both are in the upper half.

Finlay was matched today with Ellis Knowles, Apawamis, in the quarter-finals, and McCarthy with W. Halsey Taft of Montclair, in the event of victory they were to meet in the semi-finals this afternoon.

Yakavonis Elected

Brockton, June 14—Matthew Yakavonis was elected captain of the Brockton high school baseball team of 1930 He played first base most of the present season and was a hard hitter

CORNELL CREW ON HUDSON TODAY

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14—All the crews in the five colleges rowing camps were on the river for long workouts.

Syracuse alone went below the bridge and the upper reaches of the course were practice waters for the Navy, Columbia, Penn and California.

Coach Ebright took his champion California varsity eight upstream slowly and sent it down just before noon at a sharp clip, no time was taken.

Navy's program was relatively light after an attempt against time by the varsity late and the elder Richard Glendon of the midies and Rusty Carlow of Penn did not choose to push their men.

Jim Ten Eyck had his three Syracuse boats downstream clicking off the mileage which invariably gives Syracuse the distinction of being the most-rowed navy on the river.

At present the crew that during the spring was the Junior varsity now is designated as the first boat with Herrick at stroke while the former varsity now is rated as the "Jayvee." It contains O'Connor, captain, at No. 2 and Freeman is the stroke.

Until the supposed varsity shows improved form, Ten Eyck plans to let the former Jayvee crew stand as the four-mile combination.

Newton Boy Wins

Providence, June 14—Arthur D. Noble of Newton, Mass., schoolboy tennis star, advanced to the semi-finals of the Rhode Island clay court championships at the East Side Tennis Club, when he defeated T. E. Jansen, Jr., of Boston, 6—2, 6—1.

PEACE is in sight: they served Harvard cigars at the B. C. Alumni dinner—and how the wrestling promoters grin at all this publicity—the gamblers also will be taken over the jumps at the Country Club races—Babe Ruth has gone fishing; he just can't seem to get away from hooks—ball clubs cut down to player limit tomorrow; Boston teams should build up to it—E. Mack chirps that he could nominate a dozen entries for any six day skating contest—he means the high rollers, though—Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker, is the busiest heavyweight; he doesn't believe that half a loaf is better than none—Doc Kendall, 74, admits he may be old enough soon to play seriously in one of those senior tournaments—Dan Bowley, the Weymouth sage, states that baseball scouts dig up a lot of good stuff—maybe, but not a lot of good ball players—John Drohan opines that Weymouth shoemakers would give their awl for dear ol' Dan—that's all.

NAVY OARSMAN OUT OF RACE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14—Thomas E. Chambers, No. 2 oarsman in the Naval Academy first year shell, was stricken with appendicitis and will not be able to row in the intercollegiate regatta here June 24. He is under the care of a local physician and will be sent back to Annapolis as soon as his condition permits.

Chambers is the fifth oarsman Coach Buck Walsh of the Navy plebes has lost since April because of illness. His place will be filled by Beaugurette, a substitute, Coach Walsh announced.

SEIBOLD HURLS AGAINST CARDS

St. Louis, June 14—Judge Emil Fuchs, on his return to Boston, will decide whether or not he will continue to act as president-owner-manager.

Fuchs had a long conference with Pres. Sam Breadon of the Cardinals. At the conclusion the Judge said that no trades were contemplated before the time limit, which is tomorrow.

Forced into idleness for a second time because of inclement weather, the Cardinals and Boston Braves hope to play their series opener today in conjunction with the annual Tuberculosis Day program, postponed from Wednesday.

Today's game starts 4 o'clock because of the long program arranged by the Tuberculosis Day committee.

COACH DECREES EASY WORK FOR HARVARD

Red Top, Conn., June 14—The Harvard crews experienced their hottest day since they came here for training and, their coaches fearing they would be tired out, were given light workouts.

Richard Emmet, former Harvard varsity captain, whose brother is No. 7 in the first boat, watched the easy paddling practice up the Thames.

The freshmen and combination eights, under Freshman Coach H. H. Haines were scheduled to arrive at New London late today. They will be brought to camp on launches and given as quarters the old Red Top building near the boathouse. The upper classmen will remain in the new quarters.

Freighter Brings 13 Yachts to Hub

Portland, Me., June 14—Decklead of the Yankee Line freighter, Scotia, that arrived here consisted of 17 yachts, each a duplicate, four set off here and the others to be unloaded at Boston, where the ship will proceed Sunday. The boats are for members of the Warwick Yacht Club of Providence. They were built in Germany and will be raced all along the Atlantic seaboard this season. Twenty-one have been shipped already or will be shipped.

Favorites Do Well in Ohio Racing

Mansfield, O., June 14—Favorites fared well in the races of the Ohio Short Ship Circuit here. Checkers the Great was the only one to falter, Allie Heart and Helen Jolla battling for the classified trot.

Peter Rhuff easily defeated Vivian H in the special match race for the colts.

RACERS SET TO BATTLE TOMORROW

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

A FINE lot of horses from stables all over the country again was seen at the Country Club today, schooling for the races tomorrow and Monday, which will mark the 39th meeting at the Brookline track.

These races, which are being run under the auspices of the Eastern Horse Club, should be the best ever, with a splendid lot of horses entered.

Among the early morning owners who had their select group of runners and jumpers out on the track were Edward Tuckerman, Jr., Bayard Warren, Augustus Goodwin, John R. Macomber, George H. D. Lamson, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. C. P. Heffenger, Mrs. Victor Emanuel, William Almy, Jr., Hugh Bancroft, Jr., and Louis K. Liggett.

According to the water, most of the horses are in unusually fine shape. They romped about the flat and over the steeplechase jumps. The races showed plenty of class going through their early morning training, and if they produce as much tomorrow and the holiday things should be good for all.

THE Eastland Stable, Pomfret, Ct., owned by C. V. B. Cushman, with Bill Norton, former Brookline boy, as trainer of the entries, looks like a fine outfit. Six of the best horses that will be on the track for the Eastern Horse meeting are in the group.

Mint Sauce, a fine runner, is a likely choice to snatch the honors in the first flat tomorrow. This is one of the Eastland Stable entries. George H. D. Lamson of Framingham has Flag of Fashion down to start.

John R. Macomber of Framingham has entered the names of four of his stable, Crystallite, White Pop, September Dawn and Goblin.

Mrs. Homer Loring will send out Evader; Mrs. Victor Emanuel her Sun Forward, and Franklin Baker, Jr., Retaliate.

From the Eastland Stables comes another crack runner on the flat in Pennat Lass. Mrs. William Dexter has Castle Bar, another top favorite in the group. Lamson's Flag of Fashion and Play Days, and numerous others, are entered for the Myopia six-furlong flat.

BAD TRACK FOR $50,000 RACE

Chicago, June 14 (AP)—Another battle in the mud is the almost certain prospect for the $50,000 American Derby, which will be decided among three-year-olds over a mile and a quarter at Washington Park tomorrow.

Three days and nights of heavy rain had turned the course into a quagmire and no amount of sunshine is likely to make it fast by post time.

The condition of the track has made Clyde Van Dusen, which splashed through the mud to win the Kentucky Derby, an overwhelming favorite. The mighty son of Man o' War today was quoted at 8 to 5, with indications that the odds would drop to 7 to 5 or less by post time.

Several other speedy stake winners which have won events recently in the mud and rain are entered in the Derby and their stock, too, has skyrocketed. Among these are African, Windy City, Karl Eitel and Paulbunyan.

Larry McAtee, who rode Clyde Van Dusen in the Kentucky Derby, will not ride the fleet colt tomorrow because of a previous engagement. He will be replaced by Willie Garner of the famous Garner family of riders.

Legion League Nines War Tomorrow

Thomas J. Roberts Post No. 216, American Legion, of Dorchester Center, is sponsoring a baseball team in the American Legion Junior Baseball League.

The team is being coached by Attorney James E. Sullivan, former Georgetown athlete of note, who is likewise chairman of the post's membership committee. The opening game of the league will be played against the junior team, sponsored by William F. Sinclair Post No. 250 (city employes), American Legion, at the Wainwright st. playgrounds, Ashmont, on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Industrials Open Baseball Season

Worcester, June 14—Worcester County Industrial Baseball League opened its season with two seven-inning games here. Norton's defending champions, defeated Whittalls, runner-up, 4 to 2, and Worcester Gas defeated Wright Wire, 8 to 0.

WILL OPPOSE EAGLES

B. C. Warms Up for H. C. Against Tufts

By JOHN GILLOOLY

JOHNNY DIXON and Chet Storey are opposing boxmen when Boston College and Tufts renew diamond hostilities after a break of three years at the Oval today. Both are sophomores and rated second string chuckers.

Dixon who was a school boy sensation at Norwood high, has had a poor year because Coach Duffy has been remodelling his flinging style. The lanky six-footer has improved gradually until now he seems to have mastered the method prescribed by the B. C. coach.

Johnny has worked in many important games this spring although he is but a sophomore. He was responsible for the Fordham loss but that was his first big game. He pitched well for two frames each against Holy Cross and Quantico.

The B. C. coach has been grooming Dixon for next spring to take over Hugh McNulty's place. Duffy believes now that Dixon will be one of the best college fingers in the East next season and expects him to baffle the Jumbos today.

Storey is a mound find of Coach Ken Nash. His first appearance was against the New Hampshire University nine. He held the Wildcats to six scattered hits and issued but one pass. This is great pitching for a sophomore turning in his first varsity performance.

New England League Notes

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

Although Lynn lost to Portland, Tom Whelan's club remained at the top of the heap by the scantiest of margins, five points separating them from Lewiston.

Lew North, Portland pitcher, continues to have the Indian sign on the Lynn club, turning in his third victory over the Shoe City team in two weeks.

Franz Schmidt, star twirler of the Lynn club, was on the mound, and held the Mariners to six hits, but a batting rally in the eighth inning proved disastrous to the speedball artist.

Rumors around the circuit are that Lewiston gave up $1000 to obtain the services of Art Parisien, formerly of the Haverhill club.

Joe Cicero, former Salem star, is having a great year with the Pittsfield club. Shano Collins has shifted him to the outfield, where he seems to be right at home.

Ora Corella, who played on the Lynn champs for two years has been shifted to second base, which position he occupied with the Lynn club. He has been playing shortstop all year and hitting the ball hard.

Bernie McHugh, the Lynn first sacker, looks like the best in the league. The former Nashua star has a wonderful gun, and when he comes to bat the outfielders move back to the fence.

When Jimmy O'Neill, Lewiston catcher, came to Lynn the first time after being released by the Shoe City club, he was given a big welcome by the Eat Hearty Club, of which he was a member. The boys presented him with a traveling bag, and it is said that the bag was full of sandwiches.

Duffy Lewis, former Red Sox star and now manager of the Portland club, has his boys hustling and fighting for the league gonfalon. He has a well balanced club and should be up there at the end of the season.

Gus Daum, one of the umpires, was one of the best catchers in the old New England League. The boys do not argue with Gus much, as they know he is pretty near ... one of the ... Marty ... another capable official. This pair has been working together for two years.

Risko Does Last Hard Training for Maloney Bout Today

MEN MEET IN OPEN MONDAY

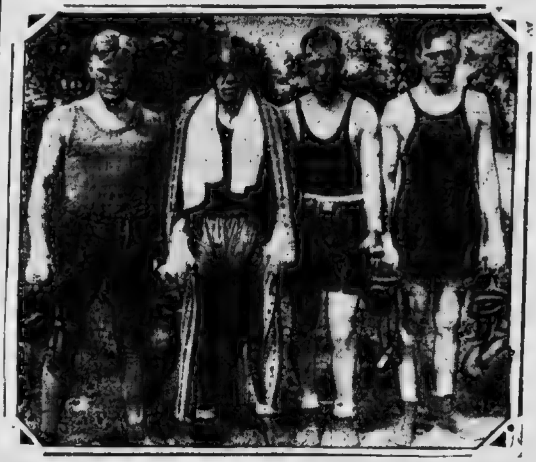

THE last hard training session for Johnny Risko, the Cleveland rubber man, takes place today for his return ring engagement with Jimmy Maloney of South Boston, the big heavyweight feature which will launch the open-air boxing season in the Hub next Monday night at Braves Field.

Every day for the past two weeks, Risko has stepped through hard training sessions and boxed from 3 to 10 rounds daily. Never before has the Clevelander trained so strenuously for a match.

Risko returns to his boxing after a day's layoff, but is expected to take things easy tomorrow in order to be at his best when he steps into the ring on Monday night.

According to reports both Maloney and Risko are at the peak and there will be no eleventh hour hitches in this bout, for Risko holds a record of never having been forced to call off a bout for any reason.

FOUR OF A KIND EXPECT WIN

Owen Moran Met Tommy O'Toole and Won Under Wraps, Says Tad

For many years "Tad," T. A. Dorgan, one of the greatest cartoonists and sporting authorities that ever lived, covered the "fight" game. Shortly before his death "Tad" wrote and illustrated a series of stories describing in his inimitable style those ring battles which for thrills and sensationalism were stamped indelibly in his mind. These reminiscences deal not only with fights in which titles were at stake, but with thrilling affairs staged in private and at the smaller clubs. This story is one of the stories.

By TAD

Owen Moran, the English bantam, made good. He met Tommy O'Toole at the National Athletic Club in Philadelphia on Saturday night, October 19, 1907, and came in under wraps, as they say at the race track.

He was really a better boxer than O'Toole, a very superior puncher and, as for speed, he made the Pride of Pennsylvania look as though he were standing still.

The fight went the full limit of six rounds, but only O'Toole's gameness and knowledge of fisticuffs saved him.

We thought that Tommy was a slugger, for he had trimmed the toughest of his weight, but when he stood and mixed with Moran he was forced to "pack up his tatters and follow the drum."

O'Toole fared pretty well until he tried this slug game in the second round, and then he received a right on the point that put him to the mat for the nine seconds. It was the only knowndown of the fight, but there might have been another in the final spasm had Moran started his slugfest a bit sooner.

O'Toole was picked out for Moran as the best they had in the East. He had battled the great Abe Attell to a draw, and was looked upon as the candy boy to trim the Briton. Moran won his spurs three years ago when he polished off Monte Attell in private here. After that he went home and fought until the call of America got him again.

Both the little fellows shaped up like well-trained horses as they stripped for the fray. O'Toole, with his fighting mug, a regular Terry McGovern, peeked over at Moran, simply hungry to get at him. His hair was down on his forehead in bangs, and he shuffled his feet nervously in the resin as he waited.

Moran, in the other corner, with wide shoulders like Young Corbett, was as cool as an absinthe frappe. At first glance he resembled James Britt, of "Ulna" fame, and his little blue eyes sparkled as Trainer Awif Wicks whispered cheering words in his ears.

The crowded house was a noise. Sports were telling what a great boy O'Toole was, and others were talking of things they had heard of Moran. Clang! sounded the gong, and they came to the center.

O'Toole, with his head erect, backed away from the aggressive Moran, and both feinted, without any result. Moran continued to follow Tommy, feinting all the while and trying his best to get a lead.

They made a complete circle of the ring before a punch was started, and then—mercy, how the wind blew!

Moran feinted Tommy into a lead, which was short, and the latter dived in after his opponent with his head lowered and having no distinct idea of where he was or what he was trying to do. Moran uppercut him on the chin, and before the effect of the punch had worn off battered his man about the body with such force and speed that O'Toole was thrown up against the side of the ring, gasping like a fish out of water and hugging for dear life.

They broke away and Moran jabbed a left to the eye, following immediately with a right to the other organ of vision, driving Tommy's head back and bringing forth great yelps from the assembled multitude. Once again they parted, and once more O'Toole bit for a phoney lead and was uppercut on the chin.

It was a great round for Moran, and he seemed to have O'Toole just where he wanted him. Tommy shot out a long left, copping Owen on the jaw, and then started to mix, only to find that he had a master before him. He backed away again and was in his own corner as the bell sounded.

In the second O'Toole simply feinted Moran into knots for half a minute or so. Then they both got to that feinting trick and were bobbing up and down like jumping jacks.

Moran had a style of getting on his toes and fiddling with his left like a cat. He jabbed three or four lefts and then drove his goodly right.

He got O'Toole in a neutral corner soon after this feinting spell and, starting a phoney left, Tommy started to block, but got a right on the chin that put him down for the count. He got up and danced away, while Moran almost broke his back trying to get in another right. He chased O'Toole around the ring, but by clinching and clever ducking the latter managed to stick the round out.

Both slowed up considerably in the third round, but in the fourth there was slugging again, with Moran the aggressor and the better puncher. O'Toole landed occasionally, but his slams lacked the power of Moran's, and didn't seem to bother the Briton at all.

In the fourth Moran was roundly hissed for sticking his glove over O'Toole's mouth in the breaks, but this had nothing to do with the tide of battle. He still forced Tommy, but was extremely wild with his right, so wild, in fact, that Charley Harvey, his manager, yelled for him to slow up and box. They boxed all through the fourth, and in the fifth also.

As Moran left his corner in the sixth, Harvey whispered, "I'll tip you off; don't go till I yell."

The English lad boxed easily, making O'Toole miss and dance away. The pair exchanged lefts and a few rights to ribs, and were going along evenly until within half a minute of the bell, when Harvey yelled, "Go in, Owen, go in."

Of all the Kansas cyclones bundled into 118 pounds, Moran looked to be the prize-winner. He tore after O'Toole's body as though his life depended upon his breaking it, and when Tommy dropped his guard to block the next onslaught he received a welt on the mouth that shook him from the floor up. He fell into Moran's arms, and was belted up against the ropes again as the bell rang.

MORAN FEINTED THE CLEVER O'TOOLE INTO AWKWARD LEADS AND THEN UPPERCUT WICKEDLY WITH BOTH HANDS—

SAMMY FULLER RESUMES WORK TOMORROW

Sammy Fuller, New England featherweight champion, will resume training tomorrow for his 10-round match with Jake Zeramby of Lynn, to be held at Fenway Park next Thursday night.

Fuller injured his right hand last Tuesday when it caromed off the left elbow of Eddie Thomas. He tried to conceal his injury, and wanted to fight Zeramby with one hand, but his manager, Rip Valenti, and his trainer, Harry Kelley, prevailed upon him to go to Dr. Somers Fraser, who ordered him not to box on the original date, which was set for last night.

The little Italian has been dogged by a jinx for the past 18 months—first with a felon on his finger; then with an eye injury; then with another hand injury, and finally with the injured right hand which caused the postponement of his battle, with Zeramby.

Fuller went on the road yesterday as usual, and will resume boxing at Kelley & Hayes' gym either today or tomorrow. Zeramby refuses to be caught napping and is continuing to train at Wamesit. The same preliminary card will precede the main bout, featuring Hy Diamond and Frankie Moore in another 10-rounder, and the same set of tickets will be used for the show.

TITLE MEET IN SEPTEMBER

The annual New England A. A. A. U. track and field championship will be held either the second Saturday or Sunday in September. At a meeting of the N. E. A. A. A. U. championship meeting held at the B. A. A. the committee decided that the annual games would be held on either of these days. It was not decided definitely which one. This would make the games held on either September 14 or 15.

The place was not decided upon and no doubt the committee is awaiting some organization or club to stage the championships. If no club or organization wants the championships, why, of course, the N. E. A. A. A. U. will stage the contests itself. For the past two years the championships have been held at Melrose, but the Melrose city committee appears to be none too eager to hold the games this season.

The committee also decided to send four men from New England to the national track and field championships, which will be held in Denver, Colo., July 3, 4 and 5. The men are Leo Lermond in the mile run, E. M. Wells in the 120 high and 220-yard low hurdles, Arnold Noyes of the B. A. A. in the 440-yard run and Sam Martin of the B. A. A. in the half.

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

"GOING to the race meeting at The Country Club, Brookline, tomorrow and Monday?" asked Mr. Boston as he breezed into the sporting department today.

"We'll be there," chirped the gang.

"I have seen the schooling of the horses at John R. Macomber's Raceland and at Brookline, and look for some spirited racing," went on Mr. Boston. "The steeplechase racing, as usual, will furnish the big thrill of the meeting. Some of the best horses in the country will be seen in action.

"Augustus F. Goodwin, president of the Eastern Horse Club, informs me there is unusual interest in this year's meeting. The number and caliber of the horses entered is higher than ever, while the public is deeply interested in the various events on the program.

"The meeting is open to the public. Tickets may be bought at the grounds on the two days of the Brookline meeting.

"I'll confess I have been pondering over the entry lists. I know that there is no open betting at Brookline, but I thought I might find somebody who would care to wager a box of golf balls against my judgment. I find I am in great need of golf balls as I continue to shoot the little white agates into the woods.

"Anyhow the sign posts point to The Country Club. You'll find me there tomorrow and on Monday, and if you happen to be looking for me next Wednesday afternoon you may page me at Raceland, Framingham.

A RED-HEADED office boy handed Mr. Boston some mail.

"I'll bet it contains an invitation," said the veteran.

"I win," said Mr. Boston after he opened an envelope. "It's an invitation to sit in with City Councillor Tom Green at the official 'Night Before' banquet under the auspices of the city of Boston at the State Armory, Charlestown, on Sunday night.

"Mayor Nichols will have the honor of being in charge of affairs, but I have an idea that Tom Green will manage to take the spotlight away from everybody. For, after all, the 'Night Before' is Charlestown's night and Tom is one of the Bunker Hill district's favorite sons. He has been doing things in politics over there for years and years and when there is a banquet or a celebration it is natural that the gang should look to Tom to keep things going lively. I know, Tom, you will make the mayor at home in Charlestown."

"I AM beginning to suspect," said Mr. Boston, "that most of those persons who are shooting at Gus Sonnenberg are merely actors in one of the greatest little ballyhoo acts staged anywhere. The purpose of the whole thing seems to be to drive Sonnenberg into a title bout with Strangler Lewis. Billy Sandow admits he set aside $25,000 for a national publicity drive against Sonnenberg. That much money can do a whole lot of talking.

"IF Sonnenberg has as much courage as I believe he has, he won't sidestep the issue. He would probably agree to take on all of Sandow's agents on the same night and top the affair off with a bout with Lewis. Gus should quit going after the easy money in the tank towns and get down to business in a real title match."

BRISCOE SIGNS TO BATTLE CARTER

Jimmy Briscoe, the Yankee boy, was signed to box Benny "Kid" Carter, Mexican featherweight, in an eight-round bout at the Revere Cycle Track next Thursday night.

Briscoe, formerly of Manchester, N. H., is now living in Revere and is under the management of Harry Kelley. On the night of May 14, he and Carter fought a slashing 12-round bout in Portland, which the Portland papers describe as one of the most sensational battles ever held in the ring history of Portland.

"In spite of a smashing finish in the last three rounds of one of the most spectacular ring duels ever staged in the Expo Building," says the Portland Evening Express, "and in which he punched his opponent practically to a standstill, Yankee Jimmy Briscoe, lion-hearted Manchester, N. H., battler, was nosed out to the newspaper decision by Benny 'Kid' Carter of Phoenix, Ariz."

The bout should be a slashing fight, and the customers who pay 50 cents, and $1.50 certainly will not be cheated.

Billy Sandow, Lewis' Manager, to Fight to Finish

FANS STILL EXPRESS DIVIDED VIEWS

By JACK CONWAY

BILLY SANDOW, manager of Strangler Lewis, who has directed the nation-wide campaign against Gus Sonnenberg, is in Boston today. He declared he would continue his fight against Sonnenberg until the latter agreed to meet Lewis or some other leading challenger.

"It has been disgraceful the way Sonnenberg has got away with things as wrestling champion," said Sandow. "Just because he happens to be a college man he has been able to pick on cripples and old men. Joe Malcewicz is the only first class opponent he has taken on since he became champion.

"Sonnenberg has visited the tank towns, where he has picked on a flock of setups.

"I have had Sonnenberg barred in Illinois, Pennsylvania and in New York. I won't give him a minute's peace until he either meets Lewis in a return match or takes on some other challenger.

"While in New York I learned that secret negotiations have already been started for a bout between Sonnenberg and Hans Steinke, the German who is regarded favorably by the New York commission. Why Steinke? He was licked in 17 minutes by Plestina, who in turn was tossed by Sonnenberg. It looks as though Gus wants to pick another sure victory.

"I don't blame Sonnenberg for getting all of the easy money in sight, but he should occasionally tackle a first class opponent.

"When Lewis was title holder, he didn't take on a flock of third and fourth raters. He would take chances with the best men in his class."

Paul Bowser has had several conferences with Sonnenberg in regard to a bout with Lewis, but the champion has refused to accept the match.

Meanwhile the wrestling pot is boiling over. Sport leaders and fans are steamed up over Sonnenberg's refusal to tackle the so called leading contenders. Here are some opinions on the wrestling situation:

CUDDY MURPHY, former Dartmouth football and baseball star—I have known Gus Sonnenberg for a good many years and do not believe he fears any wrestler in the world. When the time is ripe, you will find Gus in there with the best of them. All champions have gone on barnstorming tours and Sonnenberg should not be attacked because he has also done so. Gus has beaten the class wrestlers like Joe Malcewicz, Stanley Stasiak and George McLeod since he won his title. I never knew a man capable of winning a place on an All-American football eleven who was yellow.

JACK McGRATH, Worcester—I think Sonnenburg needs all the bouts he can get, regardless of whether they are big ones or not. He has been in the wrestling game for only two years and requires experience and action. The only place he can get it is in actual contests throughout the country. Sonnenberg only had a flying tackle when he first attracted attention, but since has mastered many more holds. Sonnenberg had wrestled everywhere. HeH has gone into towns and cities which never saw a wrestling match before. In many cases he was obliged to show under adverse conditions, but he always went through and thrilled the crowd. He has kept faith with the public, even when suffering from serious injuries.

W. HAROLD BUTLER, Cherry st., Somerville—I have always thought that wrestling was the original bunk and still believe so. Nothing that they can say about these alleged championship affairs can be put too strong to suit me.

TOMMY PARLE—I have seen Sonnenberg in most of his Boston bouts and have always got a thrill out of his work on the mat. When he has appeared here, of course, he has always been pitted against a first-class opponent as third-rate shows would not draw enough money to pay the rent. Gus has attracted many people to wrestling who otherwise would not go to the sport. I do not approve of him meeting third and fourth-rate opponents in small cities and towns. I don't suppose he can afford to turn down these offers from the people who engage him. The public in these places, no doubt, know that Sonny is going to win, but they like to see him wrestle just the same. I believe the wrestling game would do better if Sonny met only the leading challengers. No champion should lower the dignity of his position. Just now the public would like to see him tested by Strangler Lewis and Jimmy Londos.

AL STANLEY, Riverside ave., Medford—Death and taxes are hardly any surer than flim-flam in wrestling. I'd sooner bet on a Tia Juana horse race. Maybe the Sonnenberg-Lewis bout was all right and maybe it wasn't. I'm not putting down any money either way.

ROBERT DEVLIN, Medford—I have followed Sonnenberg's career since he started wrestling. I have always admired him for his fearlessness when in action. He has always had first-class opponents in his Boston bouts, but some of the out-of-town opposition has been weak. I believe Sonnenberg would help the wrestling game and his own standing as a champion if he stopped meeting third-raters throughout the country and stepped in and defended his title against Lewis. The latter would have an even chance of licking Sonny.

BOB TAYLOR, Bruin hockey player—I believe Gus Sonnenberg is a great athlete and that he has made wrestling. He can stop all the attacks which are being made against him by calling off his barnstorming trips and getting down to real work in matches with the leading contenders. By winning a big match Sonnenberg will prove to the public he is the real goods.

ATTY. TIMOTHY D. SULLIVAN, Cambridge—In this highly commercialized age in sport, all champions are eager to pick up as much easy money as possible. I believe the athletic commissions of the country should form a working agreement under the terms of which they would compel the headliners to mingle with opponents who have at least an even chance of defeating them. I think Sonnenberg should be compelled to tackle the outstanding challenger. The athletic commissions and the public look upon Lewis as the one man who has a chance to tip Gus from his throne.

TOMMY MacFARLAND, North End—Public opinion will compel Sonnenberg to give Lewis a chance to regain his lost championship. Now that Billy Sandow has exposed Gus and his way of making money in bouts with setups he will either have to give the Strangler a return match or quit the game. Now that the pressure has been applied to Sonnenberg, he cannot very well quit. He must accept the challenge or prove he is one of the biggest false alarms in the history of sport.

Farrell Tells How to Play Woods

By JOHNNY FARRELL,
American Open Golf Champion.

I HAVE before me a letter from D. H. M., who seems to be sorely disturbed by an inability to play his wooden clubs with the same degree of skill that he does his irons.

He has never been able to place confidence in either his driver or brassie, but continues to employ both because he wants to play the game as it should be played.

"I can score much better if I leave my wooden clubs home and use straight-faced irons from the tee, and the mid-iron for all long shots in the fairway. But I don't feel that this is the right thing to do. When I play a wood, I either slice or hook. Only once in a month do I hit one straight. . ."

COMMON, indeed, is this complaint among weak golfers. It is only the fear that they may be ridiculed by their friends that prevents many of them from casting aside their drivers and brassies, and placing dependence solely in the irons. There is no easier shot in golf than the drive. The brassie would be just as easy, did the ball not lie so close to the ground.

Answering D. H. W.'s case specifically, I would say that his fault is that of thousands of others—poor timing due to over-swinging. He plays his irons better than the woods because he probably doesn't swing so widely and, I might hazard the guess, wildly. I would suggest that he shorten his grip on the club letting his hands fall pretty close to the end of the leather, and draw the hands closer to the body in the address.

In this manner he will restrict the swing and at the same time make it more compact.

Grip the club a little more tenaciously, so that the hands are holding it firmly at the top of the swing. There is also the tendency to swing quicker with the woods than with the irons. A slow backswing is especially needed for the driver and brassie. Take the club back slowly at first with the left hand, pushing it along the ground until it begins to rise seemingly of its own accord.

A C. D. writes in to say that he cannot explode out of a bunker without knocking the ball "a mile" over the green. He also wants to know if it is true that some players use putters in sand hazards.

The bunker shot, like all others, requires patient practice. The tendency among the high handicap players is to pick the ball up too cleanly. If the bunker is a long way from the green that is a good idea, but when the ball is trapped say 30 or 35 feet or so from the flag the blade of the niblick should not come in contact with the ball.

Winged Foot Links Will Be Real Test for Golfers

FARRELL TO DEFEND TITLE

By BILL GRIMES

WITHIN a fortnight, Johnny Farrell will defend his United States open championship title at Winged Foot and no champion ever drew a tougher assignment.

Although there are no foreign stars competing in the American classic, there is sufficient local talent to cause the result to be far more uncertain than usual. And as Johnny McDermot is the only player who ever successfully defended his title the odds are against Farrell.

Winged Foot is one of the most exacting courses ever selected as the battle ground for a major championship. And, unlike most scenes of championship tilts, Winged Foot has not been toughened for the boys, for there is little danger of anyone making the course look ridiculous, as they did in the Ryder cup and British open.

In the first place [illegible] unerring knowledge of Winged Foot is [illegible] tee shot [illegible] be a blind or [illegible] home [illegible] on accuracy [illegible] any player [illegible] the control of his [illegible] pass quickly [illegible]

EVERY player who tees off at Winged Foot should or will fully appreciate that he is playing a "He-Man" course. The stars have been playing as often as possible at Winged Foot since the announcement that the 1929 open championship would be decided at Mamaroneck. They are quick to admit that they have never encountered a more severe test, but frankly admit that it is one of the fairest courses they have played. Also, they have confessed that they did not score as well as they thought they should have.

Another factor which will have an important bearing on the result of the coming championship will be the handling of the gallery. The Gotham devotees to golf have had little experience with United States open championships. At every championship there are thousands of sightseers who, possessing little knowledge of the game and less of the etiquette, are responsible for many players taking the count. As New Yorkers seldom give any thought to anything pertaining other than to themselves, the marshall are in for a busy three days at Winged Foot.

IN all probability, the Winged Foot classic will attract the biggest gallery in the history of United States open championships. Although the gallery at national amateur championships are, at times, difficult to handle, the task of keeping a gathering under control during an open is far more trying, and at times impossible, under any but the most expert marshalls.

In an amateur championship match play simplifies matters, for the gallery directs its attention to such players as Bobby Jones and George von Elm and the remainder of the field have a comparatively peaceful time.

But conditions are different during a United States open, which is decided over the 72-hole medal play route. Determined to see as many players and shots as possible the gallery stampedes all over the course and this is especially true during the fourth round when rumors drift in regarding the progress of the stars and the flashing of some unknown.

Players of the Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Bobby Jones and George Von Elm type have schooled their nerves for unruly galleries, but with the exception of the British open champion, they have not allowed themselves to be disturbed during championships.

Unless the gallery is held in check at Winged Foot, there is going to be more than the usual number of upsets and the winner will be the player with sufficient amount of patience to fight all opponents and also come through with a decision over the gallery.

TRAYNOR GIVEN 7½ TO 15 YR SENTENCE

New York, June 14—Arthur Traynor, 26, semiprofessional baseball player and brother of Harold (Pie) Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was sentenced to 7½ to 15 years in prison for attempted robbery.

Traynor was arrested in a downtown office building after he had attempted to rob Thomas Lang, jeweler, in his offices on the 14th floor of the building. An alarm sounded by Lang, who had been struck with a blackjack, resulted in the locking of the exits of the building and Traynor was caught in the lobby.

Traynor was indicted for attempted robbery in the first degree and attempted grand larceny in the first degree. Five to 10 years of the sentence was imposed under the Baumes' law for using a dangerous weapon in the commission of crime.

His only previous offense, police said, was trespassing, for which he was fined $5 in Somerville, Mass., where his family lived.

MRS. BARRON IN FAVOR OF TAX CUT

The name of Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, prominent Boston attorney and member of the Boston School Committee, was added to the list of public leaders petitioning Congress for downward revisions of the Federal income tax as urged by the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

In the fifteen years that she has been practicing law in Boston, Mrs. Barron has had many honors heaped upon her as a result of unceasing efforts on behalf of legislation for the betterment of conditions for mothers and children. She is a mother, herself, and finds it possible to devote hours of care to her children in spite of her duties as law partner of her husband, Samuel Barron, Jr., and the demands of her public office.

"In concerning the subject of the Federal tax on earned income, my thought goes naturally to the problem of the mother and her children. After all, it is the mother who must plan and ponder in order to make the family income stretch to magic lengths to provide for the many demands of her growing little ones," Mrs. Barron said today.

"In these complex days of ceaseless activity and marvelous opportunity, every mother wants to provide her children with all the advantages within reach, so that they may go into the world and attain their highest ambitions.

"Education is the great essential of modern life. The child, grown to maturity and going out into the world, must be equipped with all the knowledge and training that the community can provide for him. This means expense for the parents through long years. At the present time, the allowances granted for minor dependents in the federal income tax regulations are inadequate to cover the average cost of bringing up a child, not to speak of the growing expense of higher education.

"It is a splendid thing to direct the attention of Congress to the unfairness of the present federal tax. Certainly the average income could be very greatly relieved of this tax burden without impairing any great loss in the revenues of the government. The difference could easily be made up from other sources."

Webster Wiggin; publicity, Daniel Roebuck; legislation, Gardiner H. Fiske, ladies committee, Olivia Matthews; club room, Theodore G. Holcombe; Boy Scout training, Theodore G. Holcombe.

"Special" is a term we rarely employ. It is our business to always produce fine clothes—sensibly priced!

But in this distinguished group of rare Worsteds, the Bond tailoring plants have outdone themselves . . . in producing value that is generally associated with a much higher price. They are indeed "Specials" in every sense . . . in fabric quality . . . in design . . . in fit . . . and in price!

Cool grays, soft creamy tans, and the always good-looking blues . . . in styles that will be in good taste next fall—and that you will thoroughly enjoy wearing now.

It's thrifty to use Bond Ten Pay Service

There are no extra charges of any kind, for this added convenience—and our regular cash prices remain unchanged! "Pay as you get paid"—$10 at purchase, the rest in ten equal parts.

MEXICANS PRAY FOR A SOLUTION OF CHURCH ROW

Mexico City, June 14 (AP)—Thousands of Mexicans streamed through the priestless Mexican churches today, kneeling and praying for a happy solution of the national religious problem in the conferences which are underway at Mexico City.

A second conference between President Portes Gil, Archbishop Ruiz and Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco at Chapultepec castle yesterday evening was believed to have advanced the cause of a settlement of the problem still further.

A third conference was looked for some time today.

Although there has been no inkling as to what has been discussed, it was understood the conferences have been most amicable. There has been a strong noteof optimism noticeable among the conferees themselves.

Possibility of an early announcement was seen in the reply of Archbishop Ruiz after yesterday's conferenc eto questions of newspapermen as to when a statement could be made.

TAUBMAN ADDS 4 NEW STORES TO CHAIN

New stores have been opened by the Taubman chain of auto accessories stores in South Boston, Salem, Taunton, and Manchester, N. H., it was announced today.

The first store of this rapidly growing chain was opened in Baltimore two years ago, and shortly after that stores were added, until at present there are forty-six in operation.

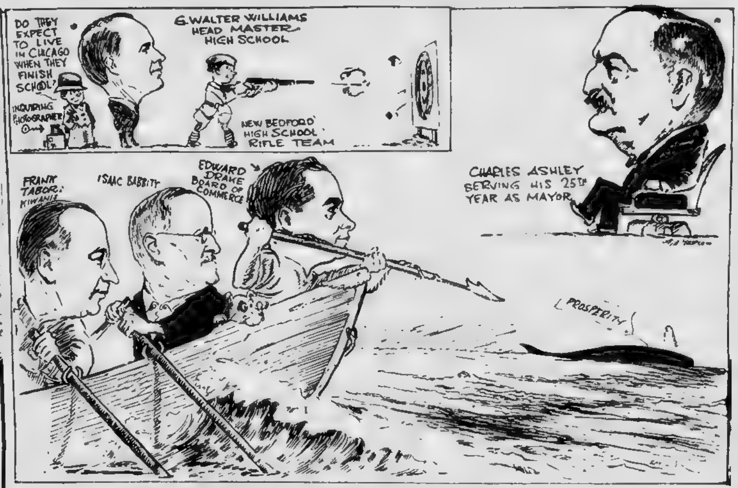

In an interview with Arthur Taubman, first vice-president of the chain, Mr. Taubman said:

"From the beginning we were firmly convinced that fair dealing, good values, courtesy and a policy that our patrons come first, was certain to spell 'Success' with large letters.

"We have not been disappointed We are particularly thankful to the people of New England, who made it possible for us to grow from one store, opened in Boston in 1926, to a total of thirteen in this city."

NEW BEDFORD MAINTAINS COURAGE AND SPIRIT OF ITS HARDY WHALERS

WHEN THEY SHOOT FOR ANYTHING IN NEW BEDFORD THEY AIM TO GET IT

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

ONE bright morning, just a few years back, the whaler Sunbeam sailed away from New Bedford. A sharp, white path she ploughed through the salty spume, while the waves lapped her sturdy sides.

She was the last of the whalers, those ships that made New Bedford known throughout the world. A few hours out of port, she was wrecked. And thus ended the trade that made millions for New Bedford whalers.

Thus ended the trade that wafted the sweet fumes of ambergris over the face of the earth. Thus was ended the history of New Bedford as a whaling center, and the romance of this seaport that rests on the banks of the Acushnet River.

There is still something in the rain washed, cobble stoned streets that lead to the water front which brings backs memories of the past, although all that is left are pictures and stories of the days when New Bedford ships dotted the ocean.

Gone are the whaling ships, and their captains. Gone are the Bartletts and Bowens, the Howlands and Wings, the Tabors and Parkers, all whaling men, who speared fortune and fame in days gone by.

A NEW generation has succeeded hardy and courageous whalers But the atmosphere of former days still hovers about the city.

On many houses that overlook the waterfront are cupolas, or as they were better known in New Bedford, "watch towers." From these more than a half a century ago, the residents of New Bedford whose loved ones had been scouring the seas in quest of the whale, were wont to scan the bay for the return of the ships.

The Boston Evening American representatives first called upon Mayor Charles Ashley who is now serving his 25th year as head of the city government. Ashley has seen the city change from a whaling center to the home of cotton mills. He has grown up with the city. True enough, his hair is graying at the temples. But he is as young as the city is ambitious.

MAYOR ASHLEY would say nothing about himself or what he has done for the city, but there are monuments that speak for him. One of them is the New Bedford high school, one of the best equipped in the state. The mayor is a lover of outdoor life.

On entering the New Bedford high school, one is immediately attracted to three plaques attached to the walls. Two show that New Bedford high has twice won the William Randolph Hearst Eastern R. O. T. C. rifle trophy, while a smaller one indicates that New Bedford high placed second in the same contest for 1929.

G. Walter Williams, headmaster of New Bedford High school, is proud of the school over which he presides.

"We have one of the finest high schools in the East," said Williams, "both from the point of equipment and scholarship." And after an inspection of the building, with its modern gymnasium for boys and girls, it is easy to agree with him.

The City of New Bedford is now conducting a campaign to regenerate its people in the consciousness of "confidence, cooperation and civic pride," as the slogan goes.

EDWARD DRAKE, president of the New Bedford Board of Commerce, is directing every effort toward making the city one of the leading industrial locations in the country.

"We are engaged in a campaign to make the people of New Bedford realize their opportunities and advantages," said Drake. "Our people must do this if they hope to survive the present economic battle. I am a collector of whaling relics, and hope that the memories of a glorious past may inspire New Bedford to even a more glorious future."

Drake is an amateur historian and has written many articles on the history of New Bedford.

Frank Tabor, president of the Kiwanis Club, dropped in to see Drake in the interests of the New Bedford campaign to awaken the consciousness of the people. Tabor is a dog fancier and a devotee of boating

Isaac Babbitt, treasurer and general manager of the Babbit Steam Specialty Co., is another of New Bedford's biggest boosters. He has been identified with every movement to improve civic and social conditions in the city for the past quarter of a century.

At the present time Babbitt is working in connection with the Rotary Club to establish a fund to put needy and deserving boys through college. His real hobby is assisting in the promotion of fraternal and social activities in the city.

NEW BEDFORD is looking toward a new day. It has seen the whaling industry flourish and die. It has seen the growth of the textile industry, which, happily, is still flourishing. As far as the textile industry is concerned the words of Lincoln Baylies, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, are worthy of note

"New Bedford," said Baylies recently, "is not only coming back, but in many respects is already back on the road to improved conditions."

The same spirit animates New Bedford today that inspired the fearless whaler of a century ago. There is a statue in bronze standing before the public library. It shows a whaler with muscles taut, ready to launch a harpoon. Beside the figure is the inscription: "A dead whale or a stove boat."

New Bedford has that same spirit today. New Bedford will spear prosperity, or perish And those who know the history of the courageous whalers know that New Bedford will never return from its quest of greater prosperity with a "stove boat."

TAUNTON TOMORROW

20,000 TO HEAR 'AIDA' IN THE OPEN AIR

At least 20,000 persons will witness Thursday night the open-air performance of Verdi's great opera "Aida," with 5000 of the audience children, who will be guests of the Boston Evening American and Maurice Frank, New York impresario.

Several hundred boys and girls of Greater Boston have been made happy already through winning tickets to the outdoor spectacle, and each day more happy youngsters are being added to the list

In order to obtain tickets for the open-air presentation of the opera at Braves field, it is necessary for the boy or girl to send to the Aida Editor a letter of not more than 100 words on "The Value of Music."

To every boy or girl sending such a letter tickets of admission to the Thursday evening presentation will be awarded.

Everything is in readiness for the gala open-air spectacle and the invitation to attend is repeated to the children again today.

The object of giving 5000 children a chance to hear "Aida" is to foster a taste for music among boys and girls, and in attaining of this objective a cast of noted artists has been secured

The dramatic tenor will be Fernando Bertini; the contralto will be Elizabeth Hoeppel; the basso, Miguel Santacanna; the soprano, Julia Peters, and the conductor, Gabrielle Simoni

Race With Daughter of Judge Frees Girl Speeder

Evanston, Ill., June 14 (INS)—Freed of a speeding charge, Ruth Walgreen, 19, daughter of a drug store magnate, indulged in some unrestrained snickers today

Haled before solemn-visaged Police Magistrate Franklin, she giggled when asked to plead. Admonished to keep a straight face, she said.

"Well, I guess I'm guilty. You see, another girl and I were racing from Fort Atkinson, Wis."

"Racing?" the court wanted to know; "racing with whom?"

"Yes, judge, with your daughter Caroline, and Caroline won."

"Dismissed," said the magistrate weakly."

TRADE REPORTS NEARLY ALL CHEERFUL

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Trade writers, anxious to prove themselves reliable prophets, have been for some weeks predicting a let-down in business that is commonly looked for at this time in seasonal lines. The expected recessions have so far for the most part failed to materialize. Nearly all the trade reports based on actual figures continue cheerful and optimism in circles of business and [illegible] more pronounced than it is at the present [illegible].

Alfred H. Swayne, vice president [illegible] even [illegible] over [illegible] in the safety Talk[illegible]. He will [illegible] as I happen to know, some new ideas regarding what is needed for greater traffic safety. His ideas differ from the accepted ones of certain authorities who are still living back in the days when most cars had difficulty in "making" a hill, and when passing a slow driver ahead was attended by considerable hazard, despite a clear roadway," because of mechanical handicaps.

Alfred H. Swayne

Needless to say, Mr. Swayne will not advocate anything to make the highways less nearly safe than they are today. He will show the great work being done by the automotive industry to diminish road risks. Mr. Swayne is well known in New England through his multifold activities. His education in youth was chiefly achieved in [illegible] St. Paul [illegible] Concord, N. H., and went to Yale later.

At one time some Wall Street observers had it all settled that Saturday shutdowns were to be the accepted order of the day. It has been a long time since we have heard anything about shutting down the New York Stock Exchange on Saturday.

"After reading the compilation of Stone & Webster and Blodget showing that the American investment public absorbed $45,803,000,000 in new public offerings between 1923 and 1929, one might wonder what the statement about 'excess brokers loans' is all about," says a Wall Street writer.

"Briefly, most of this money was used in the development of the country's resources. It built new mills, new furnaces, new factories, railways and highways. It developed copper, silver, gold, sulphur, coal, iron ore and mines of all kinds. It made millions of new jobs for men at the highest wages in history. And the important point is that most of this money came from Wall Street.

"Brokers and their customers were the big buyers of these publicly offered securities. In 1923, brokers loans, based on the way they now figure them, must have been close to $2,500,000,000. The increase since then amounts to something like $2,700,000,000, equal to about 6 per cent of the new issues sold since 1929.

"Had there been a contraction instead of an expansion in brokers loans over the last seven years it is [illegible] that dealers would not have been able to sell $45,803,000,000 of new securities to the public. For contraction in brokers' loans always means a contraction in investment purchases by the people.

Joseph F. Abbott, newly-elected president of the American Sugar Refining Co., first attracted attention in the sugar world by his skillful presentation before the Interstate Commerce Commission of issues involving nationwide sugar rate adjustments. The freight rate structure is the foundation of the marketing and distribution of refined sugar owing to the widely scattered locations of cane and beet refineries and to the highly competitive nature of the business.

MORGAN ISSUES SKYROCKETED

New York, June 14 (AP)—Stocks of the public utilities flying the Morgan banner rose like an autogiro on the Curb Market today. Starting off with blocks of 5000 up to 75,000 shares changing hands. The general list was irregular, but the utilities continued strong all day, although late hour profit-taking reduced some of the gains.

The ticker began to lag immediately after the start and at midday the tape was 40 minutes behind the market. Activity in the utilities was based on merger plans of the Morgan interests in upper New York state.

The air stocks were heavy most of the day, and the oils lost ground steadily on a small volume of sales.

CAPITAL GAS RULE CHANGES

Washington, June 14 (AP) A group of New York financiers, headed by D. A. Pearson, has acquired control of the Washington Gas Light Co., one of the capital's oldest public utility corporations.

Control was obtained through the purchase of about 15,000 shares of stock, valued at about $1,875,000, from five members of the company's board of directors.

This purchase brought the holdings of the New York group to about 75,000 of the 120,000 shares of the company.

Close Alliance of Chemical Co.'s Seen

Although officials of both companies refuse to discuss the matter, United States Industrial Alcohol Co. is negotiating with National Distillers Products Corp. for its 50 per cent interest in the Eastern Alcohol Corp., the balance of which is owned by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. It is considered probable that Kentucky Alcohol Corp., the alcohol subsidiary of National Distillers, would be included in the transaction.

The effect of such a move would be to form a close alliance between U. S. Industrial Alcohol Corp., the largest alcohol company in the country, and one of the important chemical manufacturers and the many diversified interests of the du Pont organization.

BEARS DRIVEN TO COVER IN WALL STREET

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 14—Trading in the stock market today resolved itself into a fierce tug-of-war between the bulls and the bears, mostly in the professional ranks.

The broad upward swing of prices in the last two days has finally scared the bears into covering the stocks in which they have had large short lines ever since the first part of May, and in which huge paper profits have been enrolled.

This was Wall Street's explanation of the heavy trading in the coppers, mail-order stocks and specialties today.

The restless professionals roamed around the floor of the big board giving a whirl first to the utility stocks then to the steels and oils returning in the early afternoon to the rails, where the volume of stock overhanging the market was small.

While American Waterworks fell back about 11 points to 131, on profit-taking before rallying, the balance of the utility stocks gave a better account of themselves.

Consolidated Gas moved along to 119¾; Standard Gas and North American reached new peaks, the former at 110¾ and the latter at 130¾. Public Service and Electric Light and Power sold higher. Columbia Gas and Electric dropped back about 5 points.

The rails needed very little coaxing to push the best known shares from 1 to 3 points higher.

Leaders in this belated move included New Haven, New York Central, Erie, Great Northern, Chesapeake and Ohio, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific and St. Paul.

Bond Market Shows Additional Vitality

New York, June 14 (AP)—Activity in a few convertibles and in United States government issues imparted some vitality to the bond market today. The Liberty and treasury obligations were in the best demand of the week in the early trading and prices moved up under the leadership of the Liberty fourth 4¼s.

Trading in the convertibles was featured by the heavy turnover in American Telephone 4½s. Sales in this when issued bond up to noon approximated $1,500,000, par value, within a price range of about a point. International Telephone 4½s and Atchison 4½s also found a ready market and both advanced.

The remainder of the list was spotty. Cuba Dominican Sugar 7½s continued to be a center of speculative buying interest and rose as much as 5 points to 70, in contrast with their recent low of 58.

Weak points in the industrial section included Gotham Silk Hosiery 6s, down more than 3, and Pierce Arrow 8s, down 1. Walworth 6½s showed strength.

BUILDING IS AT HIGH LEVEL

New York, June 14—Heavy construction operations in the United States during the past week continued on a high plane, the Engineering News-Record reports, with awards totalling $77,064,000, compared with $78,481,000 in the corresponding week last year.

The board of governors of the National Raw Silk Exchange has rejected a proposal to close the exchange on Saturdays during July and August.

A new record for the number of stocks selling ex-dividend in one day on the New York Curb Market was established today when 125 issues of the total of 2063 traded on the Exchange sold on this basis.

The Atlantic Refining Co., has advanced tank wagon and service station gasoline prices one cent a gallon throughout Pennsylvania and Delaware.

J. P. MORGAN IS SEEN IN NEW ATTITUDE

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, June 14—J. P. Morgan is undergoing a change which is not uncommon among big men when they approach the sunset of life. The reporters were astounded when America's foremost financier consented to pose for photographers on board ship when he returned from the reparations conference in Paris. In the past he had uncompromisingly refused.

B. C. Forbes

Here was, as someone remarked, "A new Morgan."

The fact is that J. P. Morgan of today is quite a different man from the J. P. Morgan of only a few years ago.

"One of J. P. Morgan's intimates tells me:

"'Mr. Morgan has changed. As you know, he used to be quite brusque. He didn't sometimes take any great pains to save the sensibilities of others. In some respects he was very much like his father—excellent at heart, but aggressive in manner.

"'Mr. Morgan is not like that now. He has got over his brusqueness. His manners, instead of being autocratic, are now much more democratic.'

"Then he added this significant sentence:

"'All that Mr. Morgan wants now is to make and to keep a number of good, real friends.'"

In agreeing to do as the photographers desired him to do, Mr. Morgan was simply living up to his latter-day self. He never was puglistic. Only he held himself aloof from the public. The late H. P. Davison had more to do than any other man with the modification of the Morgan attitude towards the press and the public. Harry did his best to convince Jack that he should be more accessible, more democratic, more cordial, that he should reveal himself to the people as the man his close associates knew him to be. Harry didn't make very rapid progress at first.

I well remember how, about that time, Davison, when an entirely unforeseen opportunity arose, affably attempted to have his chief adopt a more friendly attitude towards this particular member of the newspaper fraternity. But the kindly-meant gesture fell flat. Mr. Morgan refused to thaw out, a fact for which Davison later expressed regrets, adding "Mr. Morgan has a heart of gold, but it will take him time to come round to doing himself justice in the eyes of the public."

Mr. Morgan is coming round, all right.

Many able, forceful men are cold, unapproachable, gruff, inconsiderate during their strenuous creative years. They are so completely engrossed in their affairs and ambitions that they give no thought nor time to kindliness towards any but their most intimate friends—and they have little time or inclination to make themselves especially pleasant even with them. Business is all-important. It comes not only first, but first, last and all the time. Affairs are more important than human beings.

Not a few of them become almost strangers to the members of their own family—at Atlantic City last week one woman referred to the wife of a multi-millionaire utility man as having "lost her husband for years," an expression which struck me as somewhat odd in view of the fact that the couple have lived together all along and get on peaceably whenever he finds any time to spend at home.

Among the more conspicuous examples of business giants who experienced a mellowing process toward their fellow-mortals in the later stages of their life have been John D. Rockefeller towards whom public sentiment has undergone a remarkable transformation; Henry C. Frick, who waited rather long to soften and cultivate the good-will of the public; the late James Stillman, the banker, who waited altogether too long and finally was sorry for it; George F. Baker, who until a dozen years ago did nothing to gain popularity outside his own circle of admiring friends; George Eastman, who was completely immersed in business for many years but who, sooner than many others, discovered the joy derivable from large-scale philanthrophy; C. A. Coffin, founder of General Electric, who was a hard bargainer during most of his life, but later let down the bars. James B. Duke, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Anthony N. Brady, William M. Wood are among those who missed out by holding aloof over-long.

The business and financial world could be made more humane, more pleasant, less harsh, if its leaders did not suppress their better selves until late in the day.

Just a Few of the Treats In Store for Lindy Club

Ten thousand strong, the children of the Boston American Lindbergh Club will march into Revere tomorrow for a day of sport. The officials of the city and the owners of various amusement places promise the youngsters a real outing. In the Dragon's Pit they can expect almost anything to happen, and can be sure of only one thing—that it will be fun, come what may. The Virginia Reel is well known to all who have visited the beach.

Darkness and Dawn and Hurley's Hurdlers are two more amusement places at the beach that will do their utmost to entertain the children. The visitors will have 50,000 tickets to dispose of, and it is sure that they can find plenty of laughs and thrills.

Decline in Pacific Mills Is Explained

The 9½-point decline in Pacific Mills shares on the Boston Stock Exchange to 28 from 37½ represents presumably the natural reaction from the excessive enthusiasm generated by the price of 41½ obtained at auction for the [illegible] share block that was part of the collateral securing the Lockwood Greene & Co. note. There has been no striking change in the affairs of the company.

ONE of the perennial rumors that pops up in the film industry is the report that Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" will be filmed. It is one of those stories that dies hard. Now Universal is threatening to make a talkie of this most popular of all the Scott novels and, just a moment please, while I tell you something, Eric Von Stroheim is being considered as the director. Well, Carl Laemmle knows his own business and Von Stroheim is a good director though even his best friend could hardly call him practical. It [illegible] cost a lot of [illegible] with The Wedding March and Queen Kelly. [illegible] Von Stroheim [illegible] Carl Laemmle [illegible] Foolish Wives [illegible] was made by Universal. Even in those infant days Von Stroheim spent a full million of the bankroll.

HOLLYWOOD occasionally has a little time to play. Clarence Brown has bought himself a new airplane and almost any day he can be seen circling around the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. He has gone in for flying so seriously that one can almost say he has a single track mind. The Niblos, Fred and Enid, are planning to [illegible] America the one over. They will [illegible] in an automobile going from state to state and stopping at all the most interesting cities.

The tour will keep them traveling until the first of September when Niblo comes back to make a picture. Richard and Jessie Barthelmess are always on the wing, it seems. They just returned from New York and now they are planning a yachting trip down the coast, to be gone until July 1 when Dick begins work on "Young Nowhere."

BARBIZON where Millet painted some of his masterpieces and other French artists found their greatest inspiration, will have a new resident next year. Corinne Griffith and Walter Morosco are buying a chateau where they plan to spend two months every year. Barbizon has been chosen because of its nearness to Paris and its [illegible] beauty. Corinne's house in France need not necessarily be a mansion, for a chateau is not always a big palace with marble halls and what have you. Sometimes it can be a very simple little [illegible] and somehow I fancy Corinne and Walter will confine their purchase to an unostentatious little house.

James Flood will direct the Carrillo opus.

THE classic profile of Ian Keith may be seen almost any day on the set at Columbia. Antonio Moreno has stepped out of the cast on account of other obligations and has handed over his part in "Light Fingers" to Keith. Ian Keith, by the way, seems to have had more than his share of matrimonial disasters. He and Blanche Yurka came to a parting of the ways after a most sensational divorce and now he and Ethel Clayton have agreed to disagree. The Clayton-Keith separation has been arranged very quietly without any ugly comments on either side. That is as it should be. In this day and age when people decide to separate it seems absurd to air the domestic woe on the public clothes line.

ANY salaaming and bowing to visiting celebrities in Hollywood is a thing of the past. We just refuse to get excited over anything. If King George should suddenly alight from an airplane the blase Hollywoodites wouldn't even get a thrill. We have had them all out here, big and little, great and near-great.

Now Sigmund Romberg, who is under a long term contract to Warner Brothers, and Arthur Hammerstein, 2d, are due in Hollywood. Young Hammerstein will lend a hand to Warner in the production "Golden Dawn," which he authored, and of course, we mustn't forget Walter Woolf who played in "The Red Robe" in New York.

He will be among us, and unless I add that the story of "Golden Dawn" is also by Otto Harbach with music by Emmerich Kalman and Herbert Stothart, I will get 99 letters asking why I didn't use all the names. Ye gods, my life is just one bitter accusation after another.

RED LETTER DAY OF LINDY CLUB TOMORROW

Tomorrow is the day. It not only is the day of the outing at Revere Beach, where 10,000 boys and girls will be guests for the day, but it is the day when the winners of the 12 free trips to Washington and the free trip to New York City for writing the best essays on "What Lindy Means to Me" will be announced.

It was quite a task for the judges in the essay contest to select the best essays. More than 19,000 essays were submitted by boys and girls in competition for the free trips. It took nearly a month to go over the essays, study them, classify them, and finally go through the process of elimination. The final selection of the best essays was made by John C. Brodhead, assistant superintendent of Boston public schools; Miss Marjorie Hurd, a member of the executive board of the Council for the Greater Boston Camp Fire Girls, and Donald North, Boy Scout executive for Boston.

The boys and girls who wrote the first twelve best essays will be guests of the Boston Evening American on a trip to Washington. Six boys and six girls were selected from the junior division (ages between 8 and 12) and six boys and girls were selected from the senior division (between 12 and 18). The twelve, each accompanied by a parent or guardian, will leave Boston at 5 p. m. on July 6 on an Eastern Steamship boat for New York. The trip to Washington and return will be under the direction of Marsters Tours, which has conducted hundreds of such sightseeing trips throughout the country.

TRIP TO N. Y. FOR GIRL.

The girl who wrote the 13th best essay, regardless of her age, will be the guest of Publix Theaters of Boston on a trip to New York. She will leave Boston Friday, June 28, and will spend Saturday and Sunday in New York. She will be accompanied by a parent or guardian and Frank Hookailo, manager of the Washington Street Olympia.

Now [illegible] boys and girls [illegible] for the amusement places at Revere Beach on Saturday [illegible] the mail yesterday. We [illegible] these [illegible] We received [illegible] therefore we were unable to fill all the requests. The tickets were sent out to boys and girls according to the time their letters were received.

MANY IMPROPER ADDRESSES

Many letters were received without self-addressed stamped envelopes, or stamped envelopes not addressed and some failed to write their names and address either on the envelope or the blank.

However, the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club does not intend to disappoint any of its boys and girls. We have a real surprise which we will announce in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and only the children who failed to get tickets for Revere Beach and who wrote in and sent in the blank which appeared in last Saturday's Boston Evening American will be included.

We are sure every boy and girl who failed to receive tickets to the Revere Beach amusements for Saturday will be pleased with what we have planned for them.

Remember if you sent in a coupon from last Saturday's Boston Evening American and you did not receive the Revere Beach tickets, just be patient. You will not be disappointed, even if you do have to wait a few days. Watch the Boston Sunday Advertiser Sunday or the Boston Evening American next week for the announcement.

PENNROAD 'BUY TIME' ENDS

The concern will have $87,000,000 in cash to use in beginning operations. Although the funds eventually will find their way into investment channels, the plan at present is to dump the cash into the call loan market.

Right now, it appears that the company will have a hard time finding takers, with the call rate dropping from 8 to 7 per cent. But there may possibly be a squeeze in the next few days.

WHEAT PRICES TURN UPWARD

Island Creek Coal Declares Dividends

Island Creek Coal Co declared regular quarterly dividend of $1 per share on common stock, payable July 1. The company also declared regular quarterly preferred dividend of $1.50 per share, payable July 1.

On French Cooking

Martha Lee

AMERICAN cooking is getting better all the time, but there still remains room for improvement. The chief fault lies in a certain la[illegible]lessness, or monotony of taste which sometimes results in taking the edge off the appetite.

Particularly in the case of vegetables, the women of this country are [illegible] beginning [illegible] most [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible] of the garden.

In France on the other hand, methods of seasoning that give added zest to vegetable dishes have long been familiar to all experienced cooks and one of the seasoning agents most frequently used for this purpose is sugar. A small amount helps to restore the natural sweetness which the vegetable may have lost after being picked, and when two or more vegetables are cooked together, it serves to blend their contrasting flavors.

A considerable number of American housewives have always used sugar in cooking a few vegetables, but the secret of its general use is little known in this country.

Spinach Hainault is one of the dishes to which the expert French cook always adds a small amount of sugar. Clean the spinach well and cook 10 minutes in as little water as possible; usually enough will cling to the leaves after they have been washed. Then chop fine and drain well. Fry three or four very thin slices of bacon, cut in small pieces and add to the spinach. To the fat in the pan add 1 tbsp. flour, 1 tbsp. sugar, ¼ tsp. mustard, 1 cup vinegar and 1½ cups water. Cook until thick and pour over a quart of cooked spinach. Stir lightly and serve.

SCALLOPED CORN WITH GREEN PEPPERS

Mix two cups of cooked corn with one finely chopped green pepper and add one teaspoon of sugar. Make a sauce of 2 tbsps. fat, 2 tbsps. flour, and 1 cup milk. Stir in one egg. Mix all the ingredients together, salt to taste, and place in a baking dish. Sprinkle lightly with cracker crumbs and bake in hot oven for 15 minutes.

SAVORY LIMA BEANS

Cook the lima beans in boiling water until tender. Mix together 1 tbsp. flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tbsp. brown sugar, ¼ tsp. paprika, and ¼ tsp. celery salt. Add to 2 cups of the beans, and then mix in 1 tbsp. of finely chopped onion and four slices of bacon cut in small pieces. Moisten with 1 cup of water. Place in a shallow, buttered casserole and bake until nicely browned.

PARSNIP SOUFFLE

Cook four medium-size parsnips in boiling water. When tender, remove the skins and rub through a colander. Mix together one tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, 1 tsp. sugar. Add the seasonings and 1 tbsp. of butter to the parsnips. Melt two tbsps. butter in a saucepan, stirring in 2 tbsps. of flour and 1 cup milk. Be sure the mixture is thick and smooth. Add to the parsnips, together with the yolks of 2 well-beaten eggs. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff and fold into the mixture. Put in a buttered baking dish and bake for 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve immediately, or the souffle will fall.

FROZEN TOMATO SALAD

Peel and cut into fairly small pieces 3 cups of ripe tomatoes. Add 2 cloves, 2 peppercorns, 2 tbsps. sugar, 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. celery salt, 1 sliced onion, a few grains of parsley and 2 tbsps. vinegar. Boil for 10 minutes, then press through a sieve. Freeze to a mush. Beat a half cup of cream until stiff and add to the mush. Then complete freezing. Serve on crisp, thoroughly dried lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

NEW PEAS WITH LETTUCE

Chop ½ of a medium-size onion. Cut fine (in Julienne) one small head of lettuce. Fry the onion with a little butter until lightly browned. Add the lettuce and let simmer together for a few minutes. Then add a quart of fresh peas, a teaspoon of sugar, a half-ounce of butter, salt and pepper. Moisten with water, cover the pan and let cook slowly. When the peas are tender, add an ounce of butter mixed with a teaspoon of flour.

ASPARAGUS WITH BUTTER SAUCE

Cook a bunch of asparagus for a half hour in boiling, salted water to which a teaspoon of sugar has been added. While the asparagus is cooking, brown a tbsp. of cracker dust in a half tsp. of butter, with a few drops of onion juice, a pinch of powdered sugar and a pinch of salt and black pepper. Drain the asparagus and place on a platter. Sprinkle over the tips a teaspoon of the browned, dry cracker crumbs. Serve with boiling hot butter, mixed with the remainder of the browned cracker crumbs.

Yours faithfully,

The Typical American Girl

DRAWN BY Truda Dahl

THE girl of the ages—the American Girl! And what constitutes her popularity? The typical American girl is a combination of all the qualities which have made women famous through the ages. She's athletic; she's a good cook; she's a marvelous dancer; she has brains; she's a home girl; she's an out-of-doors girl; she's a sympathetic listener and an intelligent talker. And last but not least, she's the embodiment of Motherhood!

She's as capricious as an April day; yet as steady as the Rock of Gibraltar. Even those who criticize her most cannot find it in their hearts to condemn her, for underneath a gay, carefree exterior there's a heart which secretly yearns for the pioneer days and the hardships of Grandmother's time, and she'd do just as Grandmother did! And there's no two ways about it!

The most lovable, adorable creation of the ages, the typical American Girl, for she's the finest thing that has ever come to grace this weary world.

So here's to her! May all her dreams be fulfilled, may she know Love and Romance and Happiness and Contentment beyond her dreams, for she deserves it.

The typical American Girl—God bless her!

Keep Your Children Happy

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., PH.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

IT is of paramount importance that we keep our children happy. It is a duty that parents and teachers must not neglect.

Children are entitled to their childhood and childhood should be a time that can be looked back upon later in life as ideal.

Indeed, children are happy by nature, and if we find them unhappy and miserable, we have only ourselves, as their elders and guardians, to blame.

The child conjures up all sorts of fancies, all of which give pleasure.

The child's imagination translates itself into play, and, therefore, play becomes the most important factor in a child's life.

Once I heard a very startling statement to the effect that, since life is not play, but a hard, stern and cold business, we should restrict the play of children—at least modify it—so that we may, as early as possible, prepare the little ones for the battle of life.

Perhaps there is a certain surface plausibility in this theory. We surely do not want to coddle and protect our children to the extent of making them softies, who will be unable to stand on their own feet when they grow up.

There are children who are brought up that way and such examples may have prompted the statement advocating sterner methods of childhood training.

Nevertheless, what is obviously overlooked in such a Spartan programme is a very fundamental and telling principle that has to do with certain other known facts about developing minds.

What I mean is that [illegible] thoughts, ideas, feelings and experiences which are implanted in the earliest years have a predominating influence throughout life.

Secondly, if we make these influences happy, hopeful, bright and cheery, the adult will be able to cope better with trials, tribulations and adversity than if his mind is filled with sternness, inhibitions, repressions and soberness. We must not let our children run absolutely wild. We must coerce them sufficiently to make them socialized and acceptable individuals.

But to start a stern training too early is a fallacy.

Any adult is better able to handle his or her own manifold problems if he is optimistic and realizes always that every cloud, after all, has that proverbial silver lining.

There is always a way out. The world and individuals as well have a way of righting themselves.

You should always try to maintain a happy frame of mind.

And since children one day become grown-ups like yourself, keep them as happy as possible so that happiness may become inseparably appreciated with their outlook on life.

When all is said and done, growing up is not such an easy job.

We see children playing and romping about, and we are apt to jump to the conclusion that nothing could possibly bother them.

Yet think of the adjustments you had to make when you were a tiny tot and when, also, you grew older.

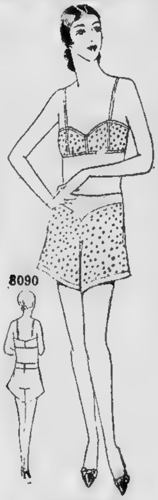

Did it not often seem to you that you never were doing the right thing, that always you were subjected to criticism?

Build happy memories into their minds so that they may have a storehouse of gladness to draw upon when the sterner trials and tribulations of life present themselves.

REPLACES NEEDLESS UNDERGARMENTS

The lingerie buyers to whom I have talked who have recently returned from abroad claim this tailored sports set is the real favorite with the chic Parisienne. No wonder for its popularity! See how it snugs the hips! Note the flared legs of panties with brief sides. The well fitting brassiere closes at back with seam at centre-front.

It's so comfortably cool and such a complete change from the undies we have been wearing.

For dance wear, since it is smart to match one's undies to frock, it is an economical choice in flowered chiffon, which blends well with most colors.

Designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. In the medium size 1⅝ yards of 35-inch material with 1 yard of 35-inch contrast is sufficient.

Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (wrapped carefully). Enclose 15 cents additional, if you wish a copy of our latest book of Fifth Avenue Fashions. All our styles are created in Paris or New York. Every pattern contains full directions. No experience necessary. Very easy to use and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

THEORY OF MINOR TAKE-OUT

	North
	♠ 8 6 3 ♥ J ♦ A K 7 4 2 ♣ Q 6 4 2
West ♠ J 5 ♥ Q 10 8 6 2 ♦ J 10 8 3 ♣ 8 5		East ♠ Q 10 9 7 ♥ 9 7 4 3 ♦ Q ♣ K J 10 9
	South ♠ A K 4 2 ♥ A K 5 ♦ 9 6 5 ♣ A 7 3

Auction Bidding: South, though holding a good four-card suit of Spades, bids one No Trump in preference because of the 4-3-3-3 suit distribution, with values distributed in three suits. West passing, North takes out with two Diamonds, because of his singleton Heart. East passing, South rebids No Trump, having confidence that his partner's bid of Diamonds was of the nature of a warning, not of a "rescue" bid. With this take-out theory in mind, South's bid of two No Trump could be made with perfect safety, because of his stoppers in the three suits other than Diamonds, with double stoppers in two of them. North, having given due warning to his partner, rested content with South's two No Trump bid.

Contract Bidding: South bids two Spades, a forcing bid. West passing, North in response bids three Diamonds, whereupon South bids three No Trump.

The Play: West leads the 6 of Hearts and Dummy's Jack holds the trick. Declarer can now count three sure tricks in Hearts, two in Spades, two in Diamonds and one in Clubs, one short of game. By leading low to Dummy's Queen of Clubs, a second Club trick might be made, but, should East hold the King, then the only way that Declarer could make game would be by establishing some long-card trick. Declarer determines to establish such trick first before losing control of Hearts, and, selecting the Diamond suit, leads a low Diamond and ducks, allowing East to win with his lone Queen. East leads a Heart, removing one of Declarer's stoppers in that suit. Declarer, however, holding still another stopper, leads a low Diamond again and again allows the adversaries to win the trick, since by so doing he is assured of at least one long-card Diamond trick, all that he needs for game.

Another problem next Monday.

A young couple were talking things over a short time before the date set for their marriage.

"There's one thing I have never told you," said the young lady, "and that is that I am a somnambulist."

Jubilee

DIRECT out of England's famous tradition for good living comes the delicious English Biscuit. It is a crisp, little confection made of the finest blended flours, special pastry butter, fresh milk and new-laid eggs. Often it is flavored with maple, chocolate, or the nectars of fruits, and filled with custard or tasty creams.

Some Americans have gone so far as to import this dainty confection, for it is unexcelled as an accompaniment of dessert, as a safe sweet for children, as a delicacy with tea. But now Weston's English Quality Biscuits are produced by English ovens, traditions and methods in the U. S. A. Crisp and fresh, they can be bought at your grocery store or delicatessen for no more than you have been paying for the ordinary cakes or cookies. up her throat, the vein throbbing at her temple, he slid his arm about her shoulders, drew her close—only for a moment, however.

"You mustn't do that, Mr. Ford. I—well, you mustn't do that."

"What must I do, Mrs. Beth?"

"Oh—you weren't so formal the last time! After I came—to all the chance of coming—being misunderstood—"

Ford smiled. "All life is a gamble, princess, and a lot of it misunderstanding. But luck wins and I feel you're lucky. Shall we drop the 'Mr.' and 'Mrs.'?"

"You called me 'Penny' the other day." Pouting.

"Penny—small change. Hm—a penny is little and cute—and valuable, taken in quantity. Am I going to have a lot of you, Penny?"

She giggled. "Why, Mr. Ford!"

"Harlan."

"But—after all, you're Ted's boss—"

"I'm your friend. Isn't that enough, Princess?"

She glowed with delight. "I like that name. Makes me feel important and all full of sparkle," she cried almost fiercely. "I wish it was true!"

"And isn't it?" he demanded with quite amusement.

"Oh, princesses have everything they want! Pretty things—and cars like this—and good times and—and people love them—and—" She broke off, frightened—afraid to see no change in the man. Another might have read too complete understanding in his urbane smile or been disturbed, but Penelope's vanity was a staunch thing and she was sure of his admiration.

He leaned toward her now, the smile gone, a deep note in his voice. "You should have pretty things, little princess. All the pretty things there are! I'd wrap the world up in a bundle and lay it at your adorable little feet! Good times—of course—and this car—it's yours whenever you want it. A small thing that—"

"But—" she was confused, starting at him, trying to drag her eyes away, always turning them back. How dark he was—almost Oriental—and how handsome! "But—your car—you don't know what you're saying!"

"Oh, then—I'll give you my garage number; telephone when you want it. I'd like to think of you in it, going out here sometimes when I'm hard at work." He laughed. "Why do this, Penny? Why so frightened, child? Just a little thought of friendliness—just friendliness—"

He leaned back and she drew a long breath, tucked her hand into his, fearing she had offended him. "I'm glad you like me—Harlan," she said timidly.

"You must let me prove that." He caught her hand. "You see, I'm one of those people who love princesses. That's what you want, isn't it?"

She kept reminding herself that she was meeting Harlan Ford only for Ted's sake. Get him interested in Ted—make him see Ted should have more money—oh, a great deal more money—that was why she stole out to meet this man.

They rolled up the driveway of the inn and Ford helped her out while his chauffeur stood by, correctly at attention. It made Penelope feel very important.

Ford inquired politely if she would have tea and laughed at her grimace. "Dry martinis," he told the still bowing manager.

She began to talk of Ted, picturing him as a brilliant young fellow who needed only opportunity to prove himself a sensation. But always the subject seemed to lose itself in something Ford had to tell.

The next morning a florist's wagon drove up and left the biggest sheaf of roses Penelope ever had seen. No name—Ford was too clever for that—but she felt the old thrill.

No word from Ford, but a huge box of candy on the second day and more flowers on the third.

Her thought was all for another; for the debonaire Harlan Ford. Yet she hardly could tell why.

So, she went on and on, hardly daring to wander where it would end, a victim of her craving for thrills.

It was from Jessie that Penelope learned that none of the wives' predictions about Myrtle had come to pass.

"Really, my dear, the woman's showing them all some things about sticking fast.

"It's not housework altogether. It's the way she manages Steve. I never favored making a fuss over a man myself—not after you're married to him—but now, that I've watched her, I can see maybe there's something in it."

"Well, I'll bet you're not sentimental, Jess. Or Carrie Bird—or Dot Ranier."

Jessie laughed but there was more excitement than malice in her tone.

"That's where you're wrong, dear. Dot Ranier tried out the Scarlet Lady's tactics on her ball and chain—just for an experiment, she said. He went around in a daze for a while and finally wound up by bringing home that snappy roadster she's been driving lately . . . a matter of vinegar or honey, do you see?"

Penelope yawned again and said she did not see. "Why," she drawled, "don't you be sweet to Jim, if you think the honey stuff is so hot?"

"Maybe I will. Goodness knows I've not made any startling success the other way, and Jim's a pretty good egg. Steve got a raise last week."

"What?" Penelope was alert now, eyes staring from a face gone white. "Steve—got—a—raise?"

"Nothing shocking about that, is there? They say the boss considers him the best man around the shop." Jessie remembered about Ted suddenly and had the grace to flush.

But the other girl did not hear. Steve's salary had been raised—Harlan Ford had done this for Steve—in spite of everything!

"I hear Steve Farraday got a raise."

"He earned it." Ford was crisp, leaving no room for argument. "We had a contest, certain plans to be worked out—you wouldn't understand—and the raise was the prize. It was open to everybody," he added significantly. "Fair field and no favors."

She spoke to Ted about it later, angry and contemptuous of his failure.

It silenced Penelope. Everybody sticking up for Steve's wife. In her resentful state of mind she regarded each good word for Myrtle as a blow at herself.

One afternoon, coming along the street, she saw that little Mrs. Bird practically had turned her nest inside out.

"No indeedy!" chirruped the small matron. "Just housecleaning."

"But what's it all about? You never were so keen on chasing dirt, Carrie Bird."

Carrie Bird perched on the stair rail and motioned her caller to a precarious seat on an upturned chair. "I got to thinking," she explained. "Steve's wife, you konw—there's a housekeeper for you!—well, anyway she said something to Dot Ranier that sort of made me wonder. She said that if you can't get a kick out of your own home you'll be a total loss anywhere, or something like that."

Funny, a girl with a past coming here to show others how to be good wives.

Penelope was weary of everything. She was tired of Ted's grouches, of seeing the house slovenly and down-at-heels, of having to make clothes do season after season, of not knowing where she stood with Harlan Ford.

Would he marry her if she were free? Supposing she were to divorce Ted, would this never-to-be understood man cease to be aloof and unapproachable? Would he want her for his wife?

Life would be different then! Surrounded by wealth she could make existence a shining thing . . .

Moiling over a dozen plans and rejecting them all, Penelope put back the coffee pot without washing it and went up to her room to dress.

She went to her window and saw Myrtle at work. She wore a pink apron and her bare arms looked very white and strong as she stirred something with a long spoon. Her cheeks, too, were pink. She was, Penelope admitted, beautiful in a big, corn-fed way. "If you care for the type," she added.

Carrie Bird and Dot Ranier were leaving but Jessie Norris was standing in the kitchen door. "Haven't smelled anything like it since I was a kid!" Penelope heard her cry. "Do be a good sport and let me come in. I'll even be useful if you'll give me something to eat."

"Walk right in," Myrtle boomed, laughing. "I was just tellin' Carrie Bird—." She turned away then and what she had told Mrs. Bird was lost to the girl at the window.

But Penelope had experienced a change of heart in that moment. "If Jess can go over there, I guess I can too," she grumbled. "Besides—"

She approached the house next door tentatively, not sure of her reception, but she need not have been concerned. The pink apron fluttered toward her and Myrtle's smile was sincere.

"I'm real glad to see you—I declare, they's nothing like puttin' up fruit for bringin' neighbors together. I ain't had a chance at tryin' my hand for a long while now and it just seems like I want everybody to take the good of it along with me."

Penelope offered awkwardly to help and Myrtle allowed her to put plates and silver on the table in the dining room while she showed Jessie how to stir the boiling, sputtering messes on the stove.

Later they had a "little snack" consisting of cold roast meat, potato salad amazingly different from the delicatessen variety, home-made rolls and tea with lemon meringue pie for dessert—a pie that fairly melted in the mouth, so flaky of crust it was, so delicately fluffed and flavored.

"You must give me the recipe," Jessie insisted. "I'm going to make a pie like that or know the reason why!"

A little cynical smile pulled at Penelope's lips. "You're getting ambitious in your old age, Jess. Who said you could make a pie?"

The two were not listening, however. Surely it was not the Jessie whom Penelope had known, this eager-eyed young woman meekly attentive while their hostess talked of whisking egg-whites and grating lemon rind. This young woman whose sophistication seemed all to drop away while she struggled to learn one of the most unblase things in the world—how to make a lemon pie!

"Carrie Bird and Dot Ranier and now Jess," the neglected guest told herself. "What's the matter with everybody anyway? Steve's wife hardly steps outside her house and yet she's doing something to all of them—changing them. Steve's wife of all persons!"

"You know, Pen," Jessie said as they parted, "I believe it would be sort of fascinating, learning to do all the things she knows so much about."

Two mornings later the odor of spice and hot vinegar again permeated the neighborhood. Penelope met Jim Norris bounding down his steps, wearing a broad grin.

"Jess is making catsup!" he bawled for the world to hear. "Thought she'd feed up the old man and see what happens. It'll be a plenty. Zowie, smell that ginger!"

Late one afternoon Penelope found Myrtle preparing an especially elaborate roast of lamb, stirring up mint sauce and a complicated salad dressing. The table in the dining room was laid for three. There was a centerpiece of three carnations.

"Just a friend of Stevie's—fella—fellow—he met in business."

"But, good gosh, do you mean to say you go to all this trouble for that? Unless it's the boss himself?" she added suspiciously.

Myrtle beamed, tremendously flattered. "No, it ain't the boss. But I do like things nice for Stevie. Say, that clock ain't right!" she gasped as a bell chimed six. "I gotta change my dress this minute—don't go, Penny—"

"Your friend didn't come, Stevie?" This from Myrtle, while Penelope leaned forward, catching her breath.

"Say, I'm darn sorry, honey. Hope you didn't go to a lot of work? Oh—" He caught sight of the table with candles all lighted and carnations spread so carefully in the center. "Gosh, I should have phoned—"

Disappointment fleeted over his wife's face almost as her lips curved in a smile. "Why it's all right, Stevie. Kinda nice this way. We'll have our little party for ourselves. I—I should've thought of it before—a little party once in a while just for us!"

"Sweet old pal—"

They hardly noticed Penelope's leaving. She went out into the early Fall dusk and tears splashed down her cheeks, though she did not know why.

Ted had got around to the opinion that life had written his name on the debit side of the ledger and there was no use struggling, things being as they were.

How had it all come about? He'd been getting on well enough till Penny got discontented. If ever he could shake the headache! Eating junk out of cans night after night—a little more money and he could have dinner downtown, not bother his wife getting his meals.

Why was he lethargic and slow, when he really liked the work? The dam' headache! Indigestion, according to the doctor he had consulted in a secret, shame-faced way one evening. The doctor had told him to stop worrying . . . How in hell was a man to stop worrying when he saw himself slipping, slipping? When his wife, without saying a word, contrived to make him feel he had ruined her life?

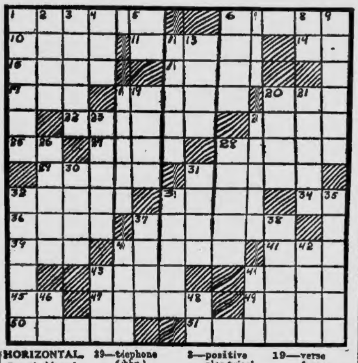

The conviction grew upon him slowly that the kindest thing he could do for Penny would be help her dissolve their marriage. Not that he did not love her still—God knew why. He kept remembering her as she had been in the old days—days at high-school and at Oberon; the first month of their marriage. He loved her now as she had been then. The Penny he went home to evening after evening was another person; a stranger who felt no tenderness for him—nothing but resentment and scorn.

He knew of her association with Ford. He knew and kept silence, feeling that a failure had no right to protest.

HIDDEN FIRES

by Aileen de Vilbiss

CHAPTER 28.

EVE had him in her toils there—no use denying that.

Don Carlos didn't have the heart to have the eyes of all Honolulu gaze on the ashes of his dead hopes. She mistook his silence for consent. She tried angling along another line. He was desirable as he stood there with the slight breeze ruffling his dark hair. She had never known a more attractive man. Grace in his every movement; even in the careless manner in which he wore the white flannel trousers and soft silk shirt, open at the throat, revealing the fine line of his neck. She wanted him as she had never wanted any other. The Colonel faded into the background.

"What are you going to do about it? If you weren't in love with that halfbreed woman we might pick up the old threads again."

"Never!"

Then as the full force of her words struck him he asked curiously:

"What do you mean a halfbreed woman, Eve?"

"That's what she is. I heard it coming down on the boat. I never dreamed that you'd fall for that Don Carlos."

"Eve!"

At that moment the slender figure of Eugenie had come onto the lanai from out the dark coolness of the interior of the house. She had heard the last few sentences. Eve saw her. And knew who it was. So that was the way the cards lay! It promised to be exciting, to say the least. A rival—for golden-haired Eve! Under the same roof.

"Oh!" Eugenie couldn't help the exclamation.

It was only a breath of sound, but it had in it all the agony of those who have known the ostracism of the world against racial prejudices. It rung the heart of Don Carlos. Eve must pay for that. . . .

Eugenie disappeared into the house after that one little exclamation, like a white cloud which but lingers on the horizon for a moment ere it scurries into nothingness.

There was a malicious smile on Eve's face. Her barbed arrow had found its mark.

Don Carlos knew that the time had come when he must tell the truth to Eve. He hated lowering his pride to the extent of even answering her insinuations. But women with tongues like Eve's trampled upon as one would step upon a snake. With some silence would be the most scathing punishment. But not with Eve.

"I don't expect you to believe me, Eve. There's an old French saying which goes like this: 'S'excuse! s'accuse' ('excusing himself, a man accuses himself'). Women like Eugenie Nahuli never need to explain themselves to minds like yours."

"Say—I like that! I'm better than any common halfbreed that ever walked."

Eve's voice was becoming that of the fishwife's again. She shrieked the words. Great heavens! She would have all the guests out on the lanai if she kept this up.

Don Carlos gave a gesture of hopelessness. Somehow, he must quiet her.

"It's useless to explain, Eve. You couldn't understand, even if you would. Eugenie is as far removed from your ideas of life as darkness is from daylight. But I don't expect you to sit there and listen to me singing her virtues. Even an angel couldn't be expected to do that. And you're anything but an angel, Eve. But in this one thing you're dead wrong; dead wrong. Eugenie Nahuli's blood is as white as your own. I don't know what you heard on the boat, but it must have been a lie!"

"You're the one who is lying now, Don Carlos," she shrieked at him. "They told me she was a hapi—a hapi-how—oh, I can't pronounce these heathenish names, but, anyway, that's what she is."

Don Carlos spoke wearily:

"Eve, Eugenie is as white as we. She is a full-blooded French woman' her father was a captain of a French steamer. She was born here and has lived in the islands all her life. She did marry a full-blooded Hawaiian, who now is dead. Doubtless that is where she was a hapi-haole." Eve seemed to be unconvinced. "I can't see any reason why we should discuss Mrs. Nahuli any more. So, if you please, Eve—" There was almost a note of entreaty in Don Carlos' voice.

At that moment Col. Drinkwater appeared and Eve's mind was drawn from the woman she hated.

The colonel came forward. Like Don Carlos, he was clothed in white trousers and a soft silk shirt. He had had Sam Lung prepare a few Scotch highballs before he had come downstairs, and he was feeling fine.

"Ah! My dear Eve! You look enchanting." Then he spied Don Carlos; "I beg your pardon, my dear. I thought you were alone."

"Col. Drinkwater, I would like to present my husband, Mr. Don Carlos Whiting."

"What! By Jove! Why this strikes me pink, I must say!" Then, as he saw the look on Don Carlos' face and the malicious grin with which Eve was enjoying the situation, he added to cover up the embarrassment of the moment:

"A corking good play, yours, I'm told, Mr. Whiting. I didn't see it, but I'm told the critics think highly of it."

"It ought to be a good one," Eve began sarcastically. "He got his information first-hand from his hapi-whatever-you-call-it sweetheart."

"Oh, now, I say," began to the colonel, but Don Carlos excused himself and vanished into the interior of the house. "I think you're rather rough on the poor fellow."

"Now, listen, Eddie, I've had a lot of preaching from him tonight, but I'm not going to stand any from you."

"Oh, I say," repeated the colonel. "No offense, my dear—none at all. You sound almost like a wife, my dear. I'd like a pleasant evening, if you don't mind."

"I'm too sober," Eve said suddenly. "Come up and mix me a few of those highballs you've been holding out. I want to feel like a million tonight."

"You'll look like a million at least, my dear. That much I'll bet?"

Eve had an eye to business whenever money was mentioned.

"What'll you bet?"

"A trip over to the volcano on Hawaii against one of your kisses, my dear."

"Agreed! Cheap enough. But who will be referee?"

"Your humble servant, my sweet," and the colonel gallantly ushered her into the house.

Heart's Desire -:- Short Story by Bertha R. McDonald

MARION GRAVES sat in the stuffy day coach of a west bound local trying to gather courage to go about the plans she had made to become Mrs. Philander Hepburn as soon as possible after reaching Merrivale, her old home town.

While she and Phil were still callow youths he had proposed to Marion and she had refused for several reasons. She, along with all those who knew Phil well, realized his utter selfishness and narrowness of mind and outlook. He was thrifty and saving, but he had absolutely no personality and his appearance was anything but prepossessing.

His small, pig-like eyes, set too close together in a long, narrow face, made his countenance almost grotesque. He shambled when he walked and slouched when he sat and his hair was of that indeterminate red shade that always looks soiled.

Neither Phil nor Marion had married. Phil still lived in bachelor solitude on the old place left him by his parents. It was reported that he had accumulated quite a bank account; also a reputation for standing to get something for nothing when ever it was possible.

Marion the eldest of four children, had taken the self-imposed task of mothering the other three when their parents passed away. For a time, they, too, remained in Merrivale, but the moment the fledglings showed signs of wanting to try their wings, Marion sold everything they had and moved the family to the city. The two boys were married now and Marion and her younger sister, Nan, kept house together in a cozy little apartment.

Marion had frowned on the advances of more than one splendid man because she felt it her duty to remain with Nan as long as Nan was single but two nights before, she had overheard a conversation between her sister and the man who wanted to marry Nan, which, in a breath had changed everything.

"It's no use arguing, Dick," she had heard Nan say. "I'm never going to marry. I'm all Marion has now. She gave up everything for the boys and me. If I leave her she'll be alone for I know as well as if I had heard her say it that she will never come to live with me."

"But dear," had come back Dick's answer with boyish eagerness, "I want her to live with us. You know I think a lot of Marion, Nan. Don't you love me?"

"Oh, Dick!" Nan had sighed. "I love you so much that it nearly kills me to think of giving you up."

It was then that thoughts and ideas and plans had come tumbling fast upon each other in Marion's mind. If she were safely married and put out of the way, Nan, her beautiful, darling baby sister, would take the happiness awaiting her. She thought of Phil Hepburn and his early desire to marry her.

She knew that Phil was still single, so she resolved to go to Merrivale and literally throw herself at his head. Her old chum, Zeta Matthews, now Mrs. Tom Bellows, long had begged her to come to visit her and the time had come when Marian was very glad to accept Zeta's invitation.

Her meeting with him emphasized every unprepossessing thing she had remembered about him, and if he was at all moved by meeting the object of his youthful proposal, he showed no signs of it.

Marion smiled ironically when at last she was alone in her room that night. The man she had hoped to beguile with feminine fascination had even boasted that he needed no woman in his scheme of things. In a revulsion of spirit she resolved to erase him from the picture, but the next moment her thought flew to Nan and her firm little jaw tightened. She would make Phil Hepburn propose.

A few evenings later Tom Bellows brought a client home to dinner—the head of a Chicago factory now establishing a branch in Merrivale. Bruce Demming was all and everything a woman would find charming, and it was patent from the start that he was particularly attracted to Marion.

The attraction was mutual, but true to her determination Marion kept her heart stirrings subjugated and devoted herself to Phil Hepburn, who, with others, had been invited to make a party.

That night she was disgusted with herself for the role she had assumed. She felt Bruce Demming's interest, and it was given poignancy by the fact that her efforts to awaken some response from Phil went so plainly unrewarded.

The next week Bruce Demming drove his beautiful car to Merrivale and invited Marion to ride with him. She accepted, forgetting for the moment that she was in Merrivale for the express purpose of winning another man.

When Zeta with an old friend's prerogative took her to task for paying any attention whatever to an old frump like Phil Hepburn, when there was a man like Bruce Demming at hand, evidently to be had for the taking, Marion recalled that to date said frump had repulsed her every effort to be more than friendly, and she resolved to try a new tack. She would make Phil jealous.

Like a grub bursting from its chrysalis, she began to lay aside her "thrift" clothes, appearing in turn in the various pretty things Nan had so generously loaned her. Immediately a change in Phil was apparent. Evidently her change of front was having effect.

"Well!" exploded Zeta one day. "I'm glad to see you waking up at last. You've been a blind little fool not to see that Bruce wants you and Phil doesn't."

Marion did not disclose the fact that all the new, butterfly ways and stunning clothes were being adopted in a new effort to snare Phil. Neither did she tell her friend that she still clung to hopes of Phil because she could not imagine how Bruce Demming could come to care for her seriously in so short a time.

It was the evening of the third party Zeta had given for Marion. Recklessly, her pulses quickened, rose tints flushing her pretty cheeks, eyes oddly alive and young, Marion arranged her hair in a distractingly becoming fashion, donned Nan's lovely black velvet gown and with an indefinable air of buoyancy, a proud uplift of her shoulders, she went down to meet the guests.

Bruce Demming attached himself to her at once and never left her side. Soon he managed to detach himself and her from the rest in a little sun den where Zeta kept her house plants. At the thrill of his touch, Marion's fluttering heart lept up into her throat. Swiftly she lowered her eyes. Surely it couldn't be that Bruce really loved her! That his arms went about her and his lips found hers.

"Friends," Bruce said plainly, raising his voice to attract attention of the assembled guests, when he returned to the living room with Marion's hand in his, "allow me to present my bride-to-be."

Next morning, Nan Graves received a telegram announcing her sister's engagement. Next morning too, Philander Hepburn accosted Zeta Bellows on her way to market and exploded peevishly:

"Darn nice way to treat an old friend, I don't think! Making Marion wear all those duds when she first came, so's I wouldn't know she had money, just so's you could save her for that dude city friend of Tom's.

PLAYHOUSE TO OPEN JULY 5

Blue Hill, Me., June 14—The Surry Playhouse, sponsored largely by Mrs. Ethelbert Neven and other summer residents, will open July 5. The construction work on the building has been nearly completed.

This project brings to Surry for the summer many famous Broadway actors and actresses and students who will live in a bungalow colony while working on new plays.

Leighton Rollins of New York is managing director, assisted by a staff from New York theaters, including Miss Affie McVickar, Frederick Thurston, Miss Marian Sommers, Miss Jean Tate, Miss Straham, Jonel Jorgulesco, Harold Winslow and Miss Judith Elder.

There will be about a dozen players available for casting plays, the first of which will be "March Hares." The project is artistic and recreational primarily, although expected to be of much interest to summer residents of Bar Harbor and other resorts of this section.

Close Vt. Bridge

Brattleboro, Vt., June 14—Town Manager William Plattner ordered the Elm st. iron bridge closed to traffic today after it was discovered that one abutment had shifted position about four inches.

G. O. P. Tariff of Extortion Menace to Public as Well as Workers

The Republican party has abandoned its traditional policy of a tariff for protection, and has substituted a tariff for extortion.

The new Republican tariff, which has passed the House under gag rule, is a tariff to make duties higher and prices higher.

It is a tariff practically to eliminate the possibility of foreign competition and so to make monopoly easy in America and to relieve monopoly of all restraint as to the prices it shall charge for its products.

It is the well-known habit of monopoly not only to charge high prices for its product but to limit production in order to make prices higher.

AND THIS LIMITATION OF PRODUCTION NOT ONLY REDUCES EMPLOYMENT FOR LABOR, BUT ALSO REDUCES THE MARKET FOR RAW MATERIAL.

Therefore, this tariff for extortion policy which the Republican party has embarked upon is a definite menace not only to the great consuming public of the United States, but to the laborers and also to the farmers.

The workers and the farmers are hit in two ways—not only in the possible limitation in demand of what they have to sell, but in the assuredly increased cost of what they have to buy.

There is another aspect of this tariff for extortion which will probably affect the farmer and to a degree the workingman also.

The absolute exclusion of all farm goods is going to result in retaliatory measures by foreign nations to exclude in return the products of American factories and of American farms.

The country has prospered under a legitimate tariff for protection.

There is no reason for departing from this national policy either in the direction of unreasonable reduction of the tariff or in the direction of an oppressive increase of the tariff.

Representative Hare of South Carolina is a farmer and a Democrat. As a farmer and a Democrat he has had the courage to protest against the attempt to fool the farmer in the new Republican tariff bill.

Mr. Hare made a list of several ordinary articles bought by the average farm family during a year. He gave the price of each article without the tariff. And then he gave the tariff charge on it, most of which the farmer will have to pay, too.

Farmers should study that list. It shows in plain, understandable language what this outrageously oppressive tariff really means.

On a $10 set of harness, for instance, Mr. Hare shows that the tariff will be $3.50.

The farmer will pay the $10, and a big share of the $3.50 also.

On a $20 suit of clothes, the tariff is $11.50.

That is an even funnier way to help the farmer, by raising the price of a $20 suit to $31.50 or thereabouts.

And here are some more of Mr. Hare's figures:

Article.	Value.	Added duty.
One mirror	$2.90	$1.00
Two hats for wife	8.00	2.00
One pair shoes	5.00	1.00
One pair scissors	.50	.42
One safety razor	2.00	.70
One pair kid gloves	2.00	1.00
One wool blanket	3.00	2.40
One wool shirt	2.00	1.00
One toothbrush	.50	.25
Aluminum ware	10.00	6.00
One clock	10.00	9.50
Plows	20.00	3.50
Nails	10.00	3.50
One cross-cut saw	5.00	1.00
One pair wagon harness	10.00	3.50

But these are only a few samples. Other articles are taxed in the same proportion.

There is even a tariff charge of $50 on a $100 tombstone.

As Mr. Hare puts it, a family of five will have to pay out between $250 and $1000 a year more than they do now, for the necessities of life, or death.

Two hundred and fifty dollars a year is a big burden to add to the average farmer's budget. A thousand dollars a year is a staggering burden. Saddle that burden on the farmer and see how far he will stagger along under it.

Representatives in Congress who have deliberately tried to saddle it on him will find that they have tried to fool the farmer once too often.

Welcome, Singers of South

Tomorrow morning, Boston will welcome a unique musical organization arriving from Charleston, S. C., for the closing sessions of the National Federation of Music in this city.

The group of 45 singers, representing the Society for the Preservation of Spirituals, is made up of members of the leading families of the Southern metropolis.

At their own expense they arranged to visit the Music Convention at Boston for the purpose of introducing to Northern audiences typical examples of the fast-disappearing type of folksong of the South.

The Boston Evening American extends the greetings of its readers to their president, the valiant World War veteran, Major Alfred Huger, and to his fellow travelers who are coming to let us share the fruits of their many years of painstaking work.

Their enterprise is a patriotic one, and it will have the enthusiastic admiration of all true Americans on both sides of the Mason and Dixon line.

Sticktoitiveness

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND.

MANY a man is going to be married in June who is not yet conscious of it.

This is the season when even dogwood looks like orange blossoms through the glamor of a woman's imagination.

It's awfully hard to convince a woman that she is married to a brilliant and masterful man, after she has stood by and seen a salesman flatter him into paying $13 for a spring hat that makes him look like 30 cents.

A woman receives her first intimation that she is getting perceptibly older when she observes that the men who ask for her telephone number are getting perceptibly younger.

Funny how the man who has played around all his life with girls who looked like the advertisements for somebody's yeast cake or somebody's beauty cream, always ends by tying himself to some quiet little thing who looks like the "before taking specimen" for somebody's spring tonic.

The first "slow motion picture" may have been suggested by "the Scotchman reaching for the dinner check; and then, again, it may have been suggested by a man on his way to make a "duty call" on last spring's girl.

Love is an anesthetic that enables us to have our freedom removed without being conscious of it. It is coming out of the ether, afterward, that is so painful.

A man's jealousy is the "stop" signal which makes a woman slow down and think; a woman's jealousy is the "go" signal which makes a man rush out—and drink.

Bits of Wisdom

The essence of tragedy is the collision between the individual will, impulse, or action and society, or those unwritten laws of life which we call the laws of God. —Mabie.

Great joys, like griefs, are silent. Marmion.

Book love, my friends, is your pass to the greatest, the purest, and the most perfect pleasure that God has prepared for His creatures. It lasts when all other pleasures fade. —Trollope.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"I'M not sick," she writes, "nor worried, nor in debt, nor burdened with some tragedy. And yet I'm miserable.

"I have a good home, a kind husband, two lovely children, a fine group of friends and, I think, the normal number of healthy interests. And yet, every so often, I go flat. I'll wake up and find that I don't care whether school keeps or not. I might as well be a ghost walking around—I'm in one of those spells now. I have been in it for a week and I'm sick of everything. I'd just like to drop everything—go off—"

Such a familiar lament! You've made it a hundred times, haven't you? So have I. Sick of everything—going through motions that, for the time, have no meaning.

AND ADDING TO OUR MISERY BY OUR CONTINUAL CHAFING AND FRETTING. What hours—what weeks we waste, in the course of a life time, by this futile rebellion.

There are, I know, many guaranteed cures for this mood. The most popular advice is—"Snap out of it! Get busy! Do something! Don't be a flat tire!"

I have given that advice myself. I have had it given to me hundreds of times. But I have come to feel that it is wrong advice.

MORE AND MORE DO I DOUBT THAT WE WERE MEANT TO BE ALWAYS "GOING ON HIGH."

I know that it's our American plan, but I doubt if it's Life's plan.

Life moves in cycles—seasons. The soil at my feet—the tree by my side—the bird in the tree—all sleep and wake and work and rest. Energy moves through them in tides—flood and ebb.

The soul, too, has its seasons.

There are times when we swing into the great rhythm of growth—times when the sap runs hotly through our spirits—when life's at the flood and we blossom and fruit.

But there are other times when the sap is sealed and there is no harvest in us.

Have you ever looked at a fallow field? It may have seemed but idle earth, yet the processes of nature were going on as surely as though each clod sprouted green. For a time that earth would be given over to silent waiting. It would lie with its heart open to the wind and the sun and the rain. It would do nothing, but something would be done to it. In some mysterious way it would become enriched. And presently it would begin growth again, more abundant growth, because of that enrichment.

Do not rebel when the time comes for you, too, to lie fallow for a little while. Give yourself over to the quiet, patient processes of life. Open your heart, as much as you may, to the sun and the wind and the rain of experience. Do not try to do anything but let something be done to you . . . And then take up your growth again, the richer for the waiting.

The Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THE silver music ebbs, sound faints and dies.
Across the stage the wondering silence waits;
The spotlight screams and then a white swan flies,
Flutters and falters, stirs and hesitates.
Borne up again upon the music's flow
To float on waves of beauty like a flood,
The white swan shimmers, gliding to and fro,
The swan that shall not see the willows bud.
Now fainter, fainter move those matchless wings,
And lower, lower sinks the drooping head
Till, while the music sighs and sobs and sings,
A quiver passes and the swan is dead.
Was that a white soul slipping out life's gates?
The music ebbs, the wondering silence waits.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 14—Thoughts while strolling: Able bodied guys who sell dancing dolls and rubber ducks along the curb. Ewing Galloway, the photographer. Why doesn't someone think up a permanent shave? Lecturing psychologists who wind up trying to sell you their sex tomes.

John McEntee Bowman, a Toronto, Can., boy, who made good in the city. Silver haired messenger "boys." The beggar with the electric light in his wooden leg. Ralph Pulitzer. Radio announcers should learn how to pronounce orchestra. Edna Ferber leaving her hotel—the Barbizon.

Another $11 movie opening. With searchlights and microphones out front — Hollywood abracadabra. What's become of the Police Gazette? John Peter Toohey, the press agent who writes plays and short stories. That expert who came over from Paris to give $50 haircuts didn't last long.

The handsome white-haired floor walker at Dobbs, O., for one of the Victor Herbert-Victor Blosom shows. Sam Scoppa, who figured in a celebrated murder trial but now sells rare art. Florence Vidor seems to have gone into obscurity with her marriage. The arch comedians shooting their arrows of contempt.

The blonde Romeo of the air—Rudy Vallee. Venerable cabbies who clot about the Plaza corner like moulting sparrows. The tuxedoed day clerks in the Sherry-Netherland. Helen Mencken's ex-husband, who resembles Valentino. Those vanishing avenue dandies who bestow sweeping bows.

Drug stores displaying signs: "No telephone booths." Wonder if they keep drugs anymore. A soft drink stand called The Last Chance. The barrels of empty grape skins in front of the restaurants in the Forties every morning. That's a clue of some sort or other. Walter Howey, the firebrand of the tabloids.

The new Waldorf Astoria will have 29 floors of fully equipped offices for out-of-town visitors. And, hooray, a Peacock Alley. But will Oscar be there? Irvin Cobb's yellow gloves. The flossy peanut pedlar in white uniform and gloves who canvasses Park ave.

Master Gabriel, a talented theatrical midget, came back to Broadway recently for a brief stay in the star role of a theatrical drama. It has a Coney Island side show back ground and revealed the pathos of a midget's unrequited love. But what provided a first night novelty was the collection of the star's fellow midgets. They squirmed out of taxicabs in full dress, toppers and swinging diminutive canes. It was a surprising illustration of how many Lilliputian players there are in the metropolis.

New York has occasional skyscraper suicide epidemics. For some reason they run in three. Psychologists say they are inspired by suggestion. Some one ends it all in a mad leap from a window or rooftop and those who have been lacking courage read the headlines and are nerved to follow suit. These spectacular jumps for some reason are the favorite method of the rich. In 12 months, there is a record of eight wealthy despondents adopting this method.

In Wall Street brokerage offices there are bond salesmen who make sales only by telephone and are hired solely for the appealing quality of their voice. They never see customers. Some of the most terrible mugs have Mayfair accents so appealing lady clients suggest they drop in for tea, but they always make excuses. One glance at their phiz and the game would be up.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

OUR pet European spy announces that Prince of Wales will marry Princess Ingrid.

Eddie has reversed the advertising slogan.

He has reached for his sweety instead of a cigarette.

In Eddie's case, the milk-white steed galloped up leaving Prince Charming in the Liverpool pump.

The announcements of Eddie's engagements have been going on so long that folks began to regard them in the same light as weather reports.

We know of at least seven American girls who announced their engagment to the prince without first notifying the prince of the fact.

It would have certainly been nice if an American flapper perched on the throne of England.

Still, Lady Astor ain't doing bad.

She ran her opponent so ragged that his vest looked like it had been captured at Waterloo.

He was looking out of a window the day after he was defeated and saw an American cruiser in the Thames. His face lighted up and he said hopefully:

"Maybe they are going to take Lady Astor home."

She is a Virginia girl and has a charming personality whenever necessary.

But she has been in English politics so long that her voice is changing and you have to grease your lapels to escape from her button-holing.

She makes a very fine speech from the marketing end of a vegetable cart. And she has had so much electioneering experience that she can retain her poise even when the hoss is running away.

We hope that Lady Astor is elected to office many more times. It also is hope that all her elections occur in England and not here.

Rout Foes This Day Who Desecrate Flag

We rise this day to pay obeisance to the flag. A hundred million Americans go with full heart through the ritual of demonstrating respect to it with raised hand or bowed head. It is no mere lip service. What has made the Stars and Stripes great is the IDEALS it stands for, and the SINCERITY with which they have been upheld.

In this occasionally troubled world, we are now in a day of tranquility. The flag means as much to us in peace as it does in time of war. We shall pay our tribute in quiet, with hallelujahs, without menacing cannonry in the offing, or the opprobrium of armed foes.

To live up to the flag, which is the symbol of our ideals, is a hard task, but one incumbent upon us. Proper devotion to the flag is a duty in our civic religion.

We must question ourselves at intervals to see if our heart is right, and that our devotion is based on understanding of the symbol, and is not an unthinking worship of a fetish.

We must all have sentiment, else we cannot live a full and truly useful life. But to be a good citizen takes not only sentiment but thought and self-discipline.

And we CANNOT be good citizens if we permit foes to impugn the flag.

The sole open foes we have today are those within the confines of our own land, who attack what the flag stands for: a FREE PRESS, FREE SPEECH and PERSONAL LIBERTY.

A powerful corporation that seeks to suborn the press; a judge who denies the right of a citizen to speak his just say; a prohibition enforcement officer who fires the bullet of an assassin—THESE are foes of the flag.
